NEED IS FELT FOR TEXTILE SCHOOL HERE, SAY BACKERS

Committee Hopes To Obtain Part Of Boxer Fund

WOULD BE USEFUL

Cotton Mills Hampered By Lack Of Trained Men

BY DAVID ARAKIE

The scheme for the foundation of a British Textile Technical School in Shanghai should meet with the approval of all Chinese and foreigners in China whether they are directly interested in mills or merely in the general welfare of the country. As while naturally benefiting the industry, it will, it is hoped, through the development of industry bring added prosperity to the country as a whole.

The Committee (composed of British and Chinese members) which has been formulating the scheme is hopeful of securing an allocation of funds from the British share of the Boxer Indemnity, which according to statements made in the British Parliament is to be devoted to purposes mutually beneficial to Great Britain and China, it being felt that while the establishment of Technical Schools will benefit China, the consequent improvement of China's industries will re-act upon the trade of other countries with her.

The object of the School is to provide a thorough theoretical and practical training for Chinese students in Cotton Spinning, Weaving, Bleaching and Dyeing and Mill Management so that the industry may be equipped with a body of technically trained competent mill managers and engineers, but while making provision for students who are able to devote their whole time to study, those men who for some reason are unable to give more than a few hours a week but who nevertheless desire to improve their knowledge are not forgotten. Classes will be provided for them also so that they may be able to get a better theoretical and practical knowledge of the machines they are required to operate and so attain greater efficiency.

SPECIAL TRAINING

All great industrial countries have realised the importance of specialised industrial training. America, England, Japan, etc., all have technical training schools in which students receive specialised training in the various industries and all have attained to a high degree of efficiency in industry. China is destined to become a great industrial nation and it will therefore be greatly to her advantage and the advantage of all, that her future industrial leaders should receive sound training and that her industries should be efficient.

Training for mill management which is one of the objects of the School, implying as it does sound business training, the lack of which has been so manifest during the financial crisis through which China has been passing, should appeal to every foreign merchant in China.

Those who have studied the industrial situation in China realise that development can proceed but slowly until technically trained Chinese are available to direct her industries, and therefore the proposal to establish the School in China where more students will be able to avail themselves of the opportunities offered will tend to hasten the advent of successful modern industry in this country.

NEED APPARENT

At such times as these when the textile industry is passing through a period of severe depression, the necessity of employment of competent managers and efficient engineers and operatives is most apparent, as though when trade is booming inefficiency merely shows as a diminution of profits, when trade is bad inefficiency results in a large deficit instead of possibly the small profit which would be made with efficient management.

It is said that the Japanese mills which are competently managed and are staffed by a large number of experienced textile engineers were, even during the worst depression of last year, making satisfactory profits, while

Smiles from the Mixed Court

Zan Tsok-ze turned loose a scalp-lifting screech immediately she felt the jerk at her ear, and as there happened a be a C. P. C. suffering from insomnia just around the corner, Waung Li-sung had hardly got under way before he was all tangled up in the meshes of the law. But there wasn't an earring to be seen about his person.

Mme. Zan was positive, however, that Waung was the man who had wrenched off her jewelry, so he was taken to the station for a more thorough overhauling, protesting all the way that he was being outrageously wronged and tearing whole branches out of the family tree of his accuser. When they stripped him at the station and found the earring tucked away in the toe of one of his slippers the prisoner suddenly became docile and had nothing further to remark.

But the earring was not the only thing the search disclosed. A police whistle was found in one of Waung's pockets. It appeared that the pendant fancier had a well developed plan of action for his raids upon unsuspecting pedestrians. Having snatched somebody's valuables and when the hue and cry was raised he would produce the whistle and render a few crowd-fetching blasts. Then he would fade quickly into an alleyway, unnoticed in the ensuing excitement.

Waung's ingenuity earned him three years residence as a non-paying guest of the Municipality subsequent to which stay he will no longer be a resident of these parts.

SWEDISH COLONY HAS CELEBRATION ON ANNIVERSARY

Large Gathering Assembles For Festival At Cercle Sportif

The Swedish Association in China held its yearly festival last Friday with a large gathering at the Cercle Sportif Francais in commemoration of its third anniversary. The ballroom had been decorated for the occasion with Swedish flags and coats of arms. The vice-president of the Association, Mr. von Normann, called for the toast to His Majesty the King; the president, Captain H. von Heidenstam, spoke for the Association.

In looking back on the years during which the Association had existed, the speaker said, many signs of activity had been shown by it, not only as far as China is concerned but also with regard to the homeland, the Swedish community having obtained through the Association a means of having its voice heard in Sweden on vital questions. The speaker, on account of these facts, was confident for the future of the Association.

The Consul-General for Sweden, Mr. J. Lilliehook, proposed the toast for Sweden reviewing in a few words the two important incidents in Swedish history connected with the 6th of June, viz. the coronation in 1523 of King Gustav, the First Vasa, the founder of a united Swedish realm, and the enforcement of the modern constitutional form of Government in 1809. The speaker finally linked the thoughts of the assembly which the home country whose symbol, the blue and yellow flag, is also celebrated all over Sweden on the 6th of June.

After dinner a cabaret was given by members of the community and old style national dances were staged, the dancers being dressed in the peasantry's ancient bright colored costumes.

Powell Loses His Temper, Knocks Bandit Sprawling

By Lloyd ("Larry") Lehrbas
(China Press Staff Correspondent)

Tsaochuang, June 8.—The bandits who hold eight foreigners captive in the Temple of the Clouds at Paotzuku are becoming meaner and more insulting and dangerous daily according to a letter received from Lee Solomon today.

Mr. Solomon gives several incidents that show the ugly mood the bandits are in and also tells of one incident in which Mr. J. B. Powell, Editor of The Weekly Review, who has been conducting the negotiations from the inside on behalf of the captives, finally lost his temper and beat up one of the insulting bandits to such an extent that he needed medical attention.

At the same time Solomon writes that the bandits have relented in their treatment of the little Chinese children who have been cooped up on the top of Paotzuku, some of them for as long as a year, through the kindly confidence Father Potte has inspired. Father Potte, a Roman Catholic medical missionary, went to the bandit camp several days ago to look after Commander Musso and any other captives who might need medical attention. Commander Musso has improved to such an extent that he no longer needs medical attention, however, and as soon as Solomon, who has also been ill, recovered, the bandits ordered the priest to leave the camp.

Father Potte was detained at the chief's camp and while there took care of the little child of one of the chiefs who was ill. The chief, to show his gratitude, allowed Father Potte to return to the camp where he could be of assistance to the captives, and also promised Father Potte that he would release at least some of the child captives who have been held, often without sufficient food, for a long period. To show his good faith, Solomon writes, the chief has already released one of the children.

Solomon describes the situation among the bandits themselves as fastly approaching a climax. There are still two or three hundred of the bandits who have no desire to enter the army, but wish to continue their careers as robbers, he writes, and they have been, and are still doing everything within their power to disrupt the negotiations. To show their feelings these same roughnecks have taken every possible opportunity to insult the captives. On one or two occasions the anti- and pro-army bandits have indulged in rough-and-tumble fights although they have not yet resorted to firearms.

Solomon became so incensed with one of the bandit guards who insulted him while he was cooking dinner last night in Leon Friedman's camp that he picked him up bodily and hurled him through the door. A few minutes later, he writes, one of the underchiefs struck J. B. Powell in the back and Powell, to quote Solomon, "beat him up good and proper—enough so that the doctor had to fix the bandit's face up."

Since Father Potte's two patients—Musso and Solomon—have improved the medical missionary has been treating the bandits. The most serious case the day before yesterday, Solomon writes, was a bandit that came in with part of his finger bitten off and a gash in his leg, the result of a peaceful argument he'd had with a brother bandit. Yesterday the most serious case was a bandit who ran in for bandages with part of his hand shot off. The gun had exploded while the bandit was playing with it. Solomon, Powell and other captives on several occasions have written of the reckless manner in which the bandits, most of them mere novices in the use of firearms of any description, twirl their revolvers on their thumbs in moving picture gun-man fashion, and fool around with their rifles. All have said that they were not nearly as frightened of being shot outright as they were of being struck by the stray bullets that whizz through the camps at various intervals, the result of some of the bandits' unfamiliarity with firearms.

While mail and supplies are coming through to them without interruption the captives write that life in the bandit camp is daily becoming more intolerable both because of the ugly mood of the bandits and the increasing unsanitary condition of the camp despite their best efforts to clean it up.

The most encouraging feature of recent days—from a health standpoint—is the public bath the captives have found in a nearby body of water. The swimming pool has been named "Friedman's Beach" in honor of the valiant discoverer.

Solomon writes that they have three feet of water and a real sandy beach. The swimming pool lies in a valley about a mile and a half east of the camp just over a range of hills between the Temple and the chief's camp. If it were not for the guards who always accompany them and sit and watch them bath Solomon writes that you would almost imagine you were back in some old swimmin' hole of boyhood days

FOREIGN GUARDS PATROL CAPITAL AS POLICE STRIKE

President Li Prevents Serious Situation By Paying Peking Soldiers

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 9.—The police and gendarmes received one month's pay from President Li Yuan-hung today and returned to duty at six this evening.

The Cabinet crisis is not yet over. It is uncertain who will be Premier or when the Cabinet will be formed but apparently the dangers of a coup d'etat are diminished, at least, temporarily.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 9.—The situation has become worse. Dr. Wellington Koo and Dr. W. W. Yen are still refusing the Premiership, owing, it is alleged, to pressure from Paotingfu.

The police and gendarmerie went on strike this morning. The streets of the capital are not being patrolled. The alleged reason is that their arrears of wages have not been paid but political circles are of the opinion that this is part of a move to drive out President Li Yuan-hung.

It is expected that General Feng Yu-hsiang's or other Chihli troops will be brought in, ostensibly to preserve order but really to compel President Li to quit.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 9.—President Li Yuan-hung this morning summoned the Chiefs of Police and Gendarmes and promised to pay each organisation $100,000.

Genreal Feng Yu-hsiang and General Wang Huei-ching notified the Legations that the police and gendarmes have gone on strike but they promised to take full responsibility for the maintenance of order.

The Legation Guards are patrolling the main streets near the Legation quarter and are also protecting the residences of the presidents of the banks. In most districts in the city there is no sign of police. The pawnshops have closed but up to the present no looting has been reported.

MUSSO GIVES TERRIBLE PEN PICTURE OF CAMP; ALL DREAD EPIDEMIC

Italian Lawyer, In Letter To Brother Here, Say Captives Are Living Under Harsh Conditions, And That Unless Help Comes Soon Their Lives Will Be Endangered; Flies Make Life Intolerable; Diseased Captors Use Their Utensils

The horrors of captivity, the dangers of disease and of death at the hands of drunken and irresponsible guards and the dilly-dallying of the bandit chiefs over the terms for their prisoners release are forcibly emphasised in the following letter from Comm. G. D. Musso of Shanghai, written on June 7—the 33rd day of his captivity—and received here yesterday by Mr. F. P. Musso, his brother. The translation of the letter follows:

"All what is said and published about our release within 2 or 3 days is 'tommyrot.' If things are not taken seriously we will be kept here for several weeks yet. The chief bandits have come to see us this morning. They say that:

"1. They are waiting for an answer from Peking (Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu), which will be brought by Anderson.

"2. They are waiting for the completion of enrollment of the bandits.

"3. They are waiting for the settlement of the financial terms.

"4. They are waiting for the settlement of the question of guarantees.

"If all this proceeds satisfactorily, the chiefs say, the matter will end in about 2 weeks.

"Here it is hell! Every day it is hell! Every day, every hour and every minute it is hell! Some of the bandits, who guard us, suffer from dysentery, two of them in a very acute state. One suffers from a flourishing infection of an unmentionable disease. They use our towels, glasses, cups. They drink from our bottles and use our pillows. The flies are by the millions. We are applying disinfectant as much as possible, but we are unable to run after the bandits and often we find dysentaric traces in the camp, covered with millions of flies. If there is an epidemic outbreak, it will be terrible. I will not mention mosquitoes. Solomon and I (besides other ailments) are suffering from malaria.

"Yesterday, my temperature rose to 103 degrees. It is a real hell! The papers are deceived and deceiving when they speak about early release.

"While the Chinese Government is playing at politics, we are suffering. Yesterday the bandits have received a good quantity of strong wine known as 'Kao-liang.' They played 'Morra', and one of them fired at random five shots from his automatic. Fortunately one bandit, who was less drunk than the others, took away the weapon. We are not exaggerating when we say that we are in constant danger of our lives. Yesterday, the bandits had a great celebration and broke into our camps, causing much alarm. You can communicate these facts to the different people interested so that they will not have any illusions as to our early release, which is a joke."

FRANCE ASSENTS TO COLLECTIVE REPLY BY ALLIES

Also Agrees To Subsequent Conference Condition On German Surrender

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 9.—The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Telegraph indicates that M. Poincare yesterday intimated to London his assent to a collective Allied reply to Germany and a subsequent conference conditioned by the cessation of passive resistance, rejecting of the proposed international experts commission as contrary to the Treaty of Versailles and rejection of the German guarantees as valueless.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 8.—A Note has been presented to the German Charge d'Affaires containing the unanimous decision of the Allies.

They impress upon the Reich the necessity for the resumption of inter-Allied control and request the German Government to take all measures to facilitate the operation of the Interallied Military Control Commission and prevent incidents on the part of German officials or the population.

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, June 8.—Dr. von Rosenberg, the Foreign Minister, addressing foreign press representatives in Berlin today, said that the memorandum to the Allies did not contain a higher offer than the Note of May 2 because no German Government would dare to promise what it was convinced the German people would be unable to fulfil.

As an illustration of Germany's poverty, the Minister mentioned that the Japanese Embassy had cabled the memorandum to Tokio, saving the German Government the heavy telegraphic tolls.

(Reuter's Service)

Brussels, June 8.—The Etoile Belge says that the German Note has disappointed Belgian ministerial circles although it is considered to show a certain advance as regards pledges and guarantees. It will not be surprising if the British, French, Italian and Belgian Governments shortly meet, probably in London, jointly to discuss a reply to Germany.

(French Wireless)

Paris, June 8.—The German note has provoked confusion at Brussels. The proposals are judged as totally inadequate.

Certain circles even think that the note marks a retreat from preceding proposals because it does not give any figure and does not contain any disposition concerning the safety of France and Belgium.

Following the telegrams it is declared at Brussels that the French and Belgian Governments are going to examine the question and to work out the reply which might be examined with Great Britain and Italy if they put pressure on Germany in order to cease the passive resistance and agree with the principal of Franco-Belgian points of view.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tsaochuang, June 8.—While the bandit enrolment continues, reports of the life led by the captives are rather confusing. All letters received agree that the food supply is good, while the sanitary arrangements have been improved, and it is now possible for the prisoners to enjoy a swim in a water hole which was discovered some little distance from the camp.

The behavior of the bandits, however, is puzzling. Some of them are willing to do all sorts of things for their captives, while on the other hand, the irreconcilable section appears to indulge in petty tyranny.

Mr. Powell, it is said, so lost his temper with one of these latter that he struck him. It was an effective strike, too, for the bandit was medically attended for his injury.

These particular bandits are in harmony with no one, another man on the injured list having had the end of a finger bitten off during an argument, while his face was also badly knocked about. Added to this there are still a number who remain unfamiliar with firearms, and their careless handling of their weapons has nearly caused several tragedies among their comrades in arms.

On Thursday one man's rifle discharged and blew part of his hand away, while there are numerous cases of accidental discharge that were not attended with injury to any one.

Father Rudolf Potte came to Tsaochuang from Paotzuku today. He states he gained the good will of one of the bigger bandit chiefs by giving medicine to his son, who was ill, and on that account was allowed to remain. He was, however, forced to leave the upper camp, and was taken to the chiefs' village, which is a little farther from the temple where the prisoners are kept.

Father Potte took rather a pessimistic view of affairs, a view that is not shared either by those at the Relief Camp, or even the captives. The sanitary conditions are certainly a little improved, but the heat is causing trouble, the whole place being alive with flies. In addition the bandits are not all enjoying the best of health, quite a number suffering from some ailment or other. Two at least are victims of leprosy.

At night, said Father Potte, the bandits fire several shots, apparently just for the purpose of frightening their captives, and stray shots in the day, also for no real object.

In a letter to the French Consul, Mr. Emile Gonsburger stated that the bandit chief, presumably the head chief, said they would be released in four days.

Incidentally there were very strong and persistent rumors that there were to be released yesterday, but nothing materialised.

The general health of the captives remains good. Reports have been received that Messrs. Friedman, Solomon and Musso have had a touch of malaria, but they have now recovered. Mr. Musso is said to be much better, and has been able to walk a few steps.

A simple telegraphic error, or a deliberate fabrication is responsible for Mr. Hsiung Ping-chi's statement that a brigade of 5,000 bandits had enrolled. At the time the telegram was sent it was officially stated here that about 500 or 600 had enlisted. The number would now be about 800.

There are not, of course, anywhere near 5,000 bandits operating from the Paotzuku base, though there are plenty of indications that the bandits have tried to get into communication with their brethren close to, with the idea of swelling their ranks to that number.

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 8.—The Times gives prominence to a message from its Peking correspondent declaring that foreigners in China are firmly of the opinion that the Lincheng case ought to constitute a turning-point in the relations between China and the foreign Powers.

It says that all business with the Chinese Government will become impossible. There are thousands of unprotected foreigners in the interior and brigands will inevitably repeat the Lincheng outrage in order to blackmail the Government if precautionary measures are not taken. It is essential that the foreign Powers now assert themselves in some formal manner. There should be no difficulty in concerting a line of action which would ensure satisfactory results from the foreign standpoint and prove a blessing to the helpless mass of Chinese people.

Tsaochuang, June 8.—The bandits at Paotzuku have addressed a communication to the China United Relief Association here, expressing their gratitude for the gifts which the Association recently made to them in order that they might not steal the provisions dispatched to the Chinese captives.

The letter is couched in very modest terms. It denies the reports concerning the maltreatment of Chinese prisoners by the outlaws, declaring, "If we are polite to the foreigners, how can we be cruel to our fellow countrymen?"

It suggests that gifts sent to the Chinese hostages should be addressed to the care of the responsible bandit leaders who will see that they are distributed to the respective recipients. It admits that as the number of bandits in the hills is very large, the "laulous" (bandit guards) cannot be expected "always to behave well." It adds that all captives, no matter captured before or after the raid on the Tsin-Pu express, will be released, for "What use shall we have of captives, when we become soldiers again?"

New Hitch Looms In Turk Parley

London, June 8.—The prospects of a settlement at Lausanne are apparently again endangered.

Round About The Theaters

Olympic Theater

Monday to Wednesday Miriam Cooper in "The Silent Lie."

Thursday to Sunday, Irene Castle in "The Amateur Wife."

Tonight and Matinee today, Tom Mix in "Ace High."

A man's struggle against a woman's past furnishes the dominating theme of "The Silent Lie," in which Miriam Cooper plays the leading role for the first time on the William Fox program. It was directed by R. A. Walsh, who made "The Honor System."

Miss Cooper plays the role of Lady Lou, a girl of the great Northwest, who has inherited the hatred of her own father because of her mother's unfaithfulness. When she discovers that her father, Hatfield (Ralph Lewis), is cheating a stranger (Monroe Salisbury) in his gambling hall, Lady Lou discloses the truth.

Hatfield flees from the town, and the events that follow go to make "The Silent Lie" as strong a story as has come from the Fox Studios.

Irene Castle, the "best dressed woman on the screen," is pretty much of an ugly duckling in the early scenes of "The Amateur Wife." Later, however, Mrs. Castle is given an opportunity to wear the distinctive gowns for which she is famous and the feminine contingent in the audience is made happy.

The role of Justine Spencer, the awkward, grotesquely clad, hair-braided French convent girl who comes to unknown America to find her mother a Broadway musical comedy queen, is perhaps the strongest and most appealing which Mrs. Castle has yet essayed on the screen.

Apollo Theater

Monday, La Bella Helene and Variety

Tuesday, Gladys Walton in "The Love Letter"

Wednesday to Sunday, Gasnier's "Good Women"

Tonight, Hunting Big Game in Africa.

Matinee this afternoon, Chaplin's "The Pilgrim"

In the story of the escape of a factory worker in a big city to a life of love and happiness, Gladys Walton, the petite Universal star has a part that fits her like a glove. Who has seen her and not loved her?

It makes a charming revelation to see the great adventure, the great danger, and the great love, all springing forth from one little letter—a love letter sent in jest.

Gasnier, who made "Kismet," offers a production of remarkably vivid parts entitled "Good Women." The theme is not new. The man who did not tell the girl that he was married, and the girl who did not tell him she had a past. But the handling is artistic, and more than one new twist is introduced.

Rosemary Theby and William P. Carleton play the leads, and are supported by a very able cast.

Victoria Theater

Monday to Wednesday, Tom Mix in "The Terror"

Thursday to Sunday, Dorothy Dalton in "The Homebreaker"

Tonight, "Othello"

Matinee, today, Wm. S. Hart in "The Money Corral"

Tom Mix, in "The Terror," has made a vivid play of western mining life. Around a mysterious leakage of gold shipments from the mining town of Sonora, he has woven a tale of fast action, of daring, plot and counterplot, of heroes and villains, and of love.

Some of the most beautiful scenes ever taken by the motion picture camera and revealing the picturesque grandeur of the Sierra Mountains are included.

Francelia Billington, as leading woman, makes a very fascinating heroine. Others of importance in the cast are Charles K. French, Lester Cuneo, Lucille Younge, Joseph Bennett and Wilbur Higby.

Unusually gifted as an actress Dorothy Dalton is ever delightful as a woman as her popularity which is universal demonstrates.

"The Homebreaker" shows Miss Dalton in a new characterisation that of a saleswoman of the road who has a mission to perform and who discharges her duty in a most delightful manner. "The Homebreaker" should increase Miss Dalton's popularity.

Carlton Theater

Tonight, Matinee today, and until Tuesday, "The Hope."

Starting Wednesday, "Passion" with Pola Negri.

"Passion," featuring Pola Negri, famous international tragedienne can easily be classed as one of the truly great films. It tells the story of Madame DuBarry, her rise and fall. It bares the inward working of the courts, of a bygone day, reproducing with gigantic sets and throngs of actors an atmosphere of turbulence, of romance, of passion that was characteristic of the times.

Pola Negri, by her work in this film, rose to her present dizzy height in the film constellation, while Emil Jannings, who plays the King, gives a marvellous portrayal.

Too much cannot be said of the part that Ernst Lubitsch, the producer-director had in the making of the play, for the work is proof of genius.

"Passion" took America by storm when it was first imported and started a new era of production in Los Angeles.

Isis Theater

All week, "Trifling Women," with Ramon Navarro and Barbara La Marr.

It is only necessary to say that "Trifling Women" was made by Rex Ingram, director of "The Four Horsemen" and "Zenda;" that Barbara La Marr was "Milady" in Fairbank's "Three Musketeers" and "the adventuress" in "Zenda;" that Ramon Navarro was "Rupert of Hentzau" and Lewis Stone was "Rudolf Rassendyl," both in "Zenda," to give some idea of the people who make up "Trifling Women."

It is a fantastic tale of a sorceress who saw the future in her crystal of three men who sought one woman and of one woman who sought everything.

The scope of the play is tremendous, the acting and characterisations are above the average, the atmosphere exotic, the settings gorgeous. . .

If the promise of the film is lived up to, it should certainly be worth the seeing.

KULING TO HEAR "HOLY CITY" AT SACRED CONCERT

The songsters of the Kuling Community will render Gaul's "The Holy City" at the annual Sacred Concert this season. The scores are now in the hands of the committee. They did not arrive in time to be circulated earlier, but will be available when the rehearsals start at 8:30 on the morning of July second.

"The Holy City" is one of Gaul's most popular sacred oratories. Although not difficult, the harmonies are especially pleasing and it will be a delightful and happy part of the vacation to work it up, remarks the chairman, Mr. Wallace R. Bacon.

There are no professionals in the chorus. It is purely a community affair and every one who can is urged to make a place for the rehearsals in their summer's program and help make the concert a success. All who are interested are requested to be present at the first rehearsal.

Need Felt For Textile School

the returns of most of the Chinese mills are anything but satisfactory, heavy losses on spinning being the general rule.

Obviously the successful growth of China's industries will have a far-reaching effect upon her stability and her trade with other countries. The greater success her industries attain the greater will be her purchasing power and the more opportunities will there be for the profitable employment of her population. Lawlessness and banditry being largely due to unemployment it follows that with the successful increase of industry, banditry will become less prevalent.

As industrialism develops and the industrialists realise their power it is probable that they will exert a very strong influence on the Government for they will no longer tolerate the chaos and disorder due to governmental inefficiency and will unit to secure and maintain a government which can not only legislate but can enforce its laws.

The question of education in China has been much discussed during the last few months and though secondary education is essential unless such education is supplemented by vocational training much of the benefit which would be derived will be lost, but if the student continues his education in some school giving specialised training such as it is proposed to give in the Proposed Textile Technical School, then the student will become a most useful and productive citizen of his country.

The proposed Textile Technical School is a vocational school for which there is urgent need and the Textile Industry being the industry of greatest importance it is fitting that the proposed Textile School should be the first to be considered, but it is hoped that it will be followed by other vocational schools as China certainly needs specialists in all industries.

ARMS SEIZURE ABOARD PIERCE BIGGEST IN YEARS

The arms seizure made by the Customs aboard the Pacific Mail liner President Pierce, from San Francisco, was the largest made aboard a foreign vessel here in some years.

The first search, made in the first class section of the ship, produced 95 Mauser pistols and 26,000 rounds of ammunition. Subsequent search brought to light 14 Smith and Wesson revolvers, a large number of parts for these weapons and 5,200 more rounds of ammunition.

No warrants for arrests were applied for, it is understood, but the attention of the United States Consular authorities has been drawn to the matter.

How Much—at 65?

In the left hand column pick out the amount of money you want to retire on when you are sixty-five years old. Make it high enough so that its wise investment at 5 or 6 percent will give you a monthly income that you can live on comfortably.

Then with your pencil follow the line of figures to your right until you are directly under your present age.

There you will have the amount you must save monthly, at 4% compound interest, to reach your goal at 65.

That is your "quota." A Savings Account is a good medium for regularly meeting that quota.

HWAI HO LOAN FOR ELECTION, PEKING HEARS

Appointment Of Kiangsu Tuchun As Director Reveals Scandal

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, June 8.—The eagerness of the Tientsin and Paoting cliques to appoint Tuchun Chi Shih-yuan of Kiangsu as director of the Hwai Ho Conservancy Board has disclosed the political aspects of the new Hwai Ho Conservancy Loan, which will be utilised for the election of Tsao Kun as the next president and Chi, the vice-president, in the next Presidential election.

The question of Hwai Ho Conservancy was raised several years ago but has received very little attention on account of the internal disorder. However, recently the matter has been receiving particular attention especially among the militarists of the Chihli party. The cause has at last been found and is involved in no less a political issue than what is known popularly in Peking as "The Supreme Question" or the question of electing Tsao as the next Chief Executive of the Nation.

It is well-known that to step into the Presidential chair means money—and lots of it. Parliamentarians want money; the local organizations want money; the other militarists want money. Despite his immense fortune, estimated at $80,000,000, Tsao does not like to touch his own pocket for the campaign. Yet the poverty of the provinces bars any suggestion of a public subscription for the grand performance of the Paoting Potentate and the last resort was a foreign loan.

The politicians in the Chihli camp have struck the idea of a loan for the Hwai Ho Conservancy and several famine relief and other organisations were made the tool to secure the loan. At the same time, suggestions were freely made to appoint Tuchun Chi the director of the board so that he, being a close adherent of the Paoting cause, might dispose of the money in a manner satisfactory to his patron. For his troubles, Chi has been promised the vice-presidency of the Republic if the scheme materialises.

The Hwai Ho traverses three provinces, Kiangsu, Anhui and Honan, which are to bear the burden of redeeming the loan when it is due for payment. In other words, the people of the three provinces must pay the bill for the little opposition has been heard [illegible] provinces because some of the leading citizens have already been fixed up, being promised jobs in the administration.

Since the conservancy would require at least $10,000,000, Chi would have sufficient funds for his activities beside the support of "The Supreme Question". For the last year, he has been a strong supporter of Loyang's policy of unification by militarism, using Chen Chiung-ming in the Southwest with advantage and supplying him continuously with funds and military equipments.

Through the bandit outrage in Lincheng, Chi has discovered a new way of extending his influence in Shantung. It will be noted that two of his trusted proteges are now on the scene of the atrocities: Chen Tiao-yuan, Military Commissioner of Hsuchow and S. T. Wen, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs in Nanking. Chen is slated to succeed Tien Chung-yu as the Shantung tuchun after the Lincheng settlement, while Wen would get a berth in the Peking Cabinet. The bandit recruits will be taken into the ranks and files of his army which forces will control the entire Tientsin-Pukow Railway as well as the Southwest.

The scheme is a big one, but it is to be bought at a great price—the resources of the people of three provinces: Kiangsu, Anhui and Honan, amounting to tens of millions!

Lasker Has Plan To Unload Ships

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 8.—In an effort to settle the fate of the Government's white elephant, namely, the mercantile marine, Mr. Lasker, the former Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, has suggested to President Harding the formation of 18 Government corporations under a co-ordinating authority, each controlling a different route and aggregating 250 steel ships.

A further 200 would be placed in reserve and the remaining the whole roadway too," said the constable who had taken Li in tow.

"What was the nature of the obstruction?" inquired the Court.

"People," said the C. P. C. "Masses, hordes, legions. knots and wads of persons. You would have thought his shop was the pay-off window for the favorite at Kiangwan."

The cause of the coagulation, it seemed, was a gramophone, but Li protested that he could not see wherein he was to blame for the congestion in the street.

"The crowd was outside," he argued. "I was playing the gramophone, but it was inside the shop."

Li was cautioned about blocking the traffic and dismissed, departing before any live young music dealers with advertising ideas could get around to find out the name of the record he had been unreeling.

TOO MUCH BALLAST

Looming up over the horizon in the hazy hours of the morning Phan Hyui-shiu gave the impression of an allied hospital ship in the sub zone during the more active period of the late—or is it that yet?—world war. He was down at the bows, had a bad list starboard and was steering a most staggering sort of course.

A Chinese police constable in the offing noticed Phan's distress and cruised over to inquire who had done the torpedoing. Phan rolled slowly over to an even keel. But not quite slowly enough. A dull, clanking sound came to the ear of the C. P. C., as of loose metal cargo in the hold of a tossing craft. The officer made sounding with his nightstick and confirmed the first whisperings of suspicion. Phan had his clothes full of ballast in the shape of a considerable number of iron bars.

From Phan's expression it was plain that the bars belonged to someone else. This he admitted in court. But he didn't know whose they were. He had stolen them from a place in Pootung, he said, and didn't remember the address.

There being no complainant to press the case, Phan was only exiled from Shanghai.

Tokio, June 9.—Japan has requested China to take immediate steps to quell the disturbances menacing the lives and property of Japanese residents in China. Japan also declared that she will always defend her nationals engaged in legitimate business when endangered by outbreaks beyond the control of the Chinese authorities, for which a reinforcement of four additional destroyers will be despatched to China today as the trouble is apparently spreading elsewhere. Japan, it is stated, is unable to negotiate with regard to the Changsha incident until the trouble caused by the anti-Japanese goods boycott is settled.

Rosy-Colored Jaipur, In Beauty All The West Asks Of The East

Every Day Seems To Be A Pageant Or A Circus Day In The Rajah City

In the Rajput country of India is Jaipur. Both color and romance are surely there. Jaipur is probably the most colorful place inhabited by man. It is the rajah city or capital of the "native state" of Jaipur—one of the several feudatory states that today go to made up the Rajputana of north-central India. "Rosy-colored Jeypore" mayhap it is which ...is essence of the glowing East; Fragments of a rainbow feast.

Why rosy-colored? Because the grandfather of the present young maharajah so decreed. The akkas went forth that His Highness was disturbed over the effect given by the diversified tintings of his subjects' buildings, and that they forthwith rewash their walls uniformly with a prescribed mulberry-rose calcimine. Hence today virtually every structure glows like old satin in the sunset hour; and it must please all maharajahs, since it pleases everyone else.

There is little, if anything, missing from one's dreams of what the sights of India and Asia should be, here in this Scheherazade town. Stately elephants pass through its streets, entrapped with the gold, silver, jeweled and plumed habiliments of royal elephantry. Their heads and trunks are adorned with bright painted decoration, tusks banded with ferules of silver. Fettled horses curvet and tiptoe past, seating magnificent soldiery in liveries of the most gorgeous sort. Guidons flutter, spur-chains clink, bits jingle, scimitars flash, flanks glisten, and they are gone. Tawny, sphinx-mannered camels doze in the squares or file rythmically by with their burdens of rich merchandise. White bullocks with green horns and red, pull creaking carts along the pavements. Keen-eyed monkeys perch on every roof-edge, or go darting from porch to balcony and from balcony to window ledge in play. Peacocks strut the sidewalks and as sunset shriek raucously to each other from the tree-tops. Indian crows and the brown kites of Asia caw and scream in and above every land and housetop in countless thousands. Pigeon flocks of enormous size whirl overhead or pave the plazas with living blue. There are crocodiles kept in the palace pools, beyond the pomegranate orchards; and burning-bright tigers, fresh from Jaipur jungles snarl and roar. Near by the maharajah stables 200 of the earth's finest steeds. Pushing their graceful way above the roofs, towers and minarets pierce a sky of cobalt clearness, and many a palace and villa trace oriental lines upon the horizon.

The people! Ah, the people and their wares! They know not that gaudy raiment is proud and sinful. They know only that bright colors assist harmonies. On every head the turban of the Hindu: carmine, saffron, rose, green, white, brown, violet, and colors in-between and beyond. Brown faces, brown limbs, jet hair. On ankles anklets of silver, on toes silver rings, on forearms silver bracelets. The women will wear garments of every joyous tinting and shade, and the men will wear only that which will vie with them, with now and again an occasional shoulder shawl of richest green or garnet or yellow. The turbans of Rajputana serve as social card indices: each indicating its wearer's religion, caste, tribal affiliations, trade, and often his family and his wealth—beside leaving some range of choice open for his taste in shades and materials.

The dyers of Jaipur—which seems to be most lavishly supplied with dyers—have but one way of drying out their goods taken from the pot. The long, wide pieces must be carried about by two bearers in the sunshine and breeze of the open streets. Therefore, at every turn one sees great orange or crimson banners afloat amid the tossing swirls of activity, as though in gratuitous defiance of all moderation toward the spectrum. A specialty of the city is a "tie-dyed" treatment of turban-cloth, so that they take several dyeings at once. Often these flaunt three and four colors in venturesome patterns. These drying 10-yard strips it is, that add very riot to the already kaleidoscopic market-places. To look down along one of the wide main thoroughfares of Jaipur is to believe you are looking pageant, a circus or a festival—but it is all in the day's work.

As for the romantic: around Jaipur, "The City of Victory," laid out by the greatest astronomer India has produced—who was likewise a great rajah—climbs and clambers a formidable wall 30 feet high. Seven massive gateways give entrance; bastions and towers at frequent intervals add picturesqueness to the crenelated, loopholed masonry. The glamour of an historic past clings to the fort-crowned hills roundabout, and epics have preserved for all time the bold deeds of warlike fathers. Six miles to the north is the deserted, semi-ruined citadel-city of Ambar, whose desertion gave origin to Jaipur; and if a more stirring old pile of imposing castlery exists elsewhere in the world, few of us know of it. Perched high on a steep hilltop, the usual transport thither is by elephant. Ascending to Ambar by elephant-back is as stately and romantic a journey as there is in India or out. Yes, Jaipur is all one can expect of the East—and it is so today.

Chefoo, N. China

Shanghai Office:

No. 10 Rue de Consulat

THE CHINA GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., LTD.

The above named Company is issuing a Prospectus inviting subscriptions for 47,500 ordinary shares of Tls. 10 each payable as to Tls. 5 on Application and as to Tls. 5 on Allotment. The Prospectus states, among other things, as follows:—

"The object for which this Company is being formed is to establish and operate a service of Motor Omnibusses in Shanghai and the surrounding district for the purpose of providing the public with additional and comfortable means of transport. The Council have intimated to the Promoters that in the interests of the Ratepayers they view the proposed inauguration and operation of Motor Omnibusses with favour, as being a probable means of relieving the present congestion of traffic in the main streets of the Settlement, and that they are prepared to give every facility to the Company provided the Company continues to use every means in its power to give efficient service and comfortable transport to the public of Shanghai. The Council have sanctioned the operation of Motor Busses over ten routes but should it be found advisable in the interests of the public to vary such routes or to extend them, the assent of the Council is assured."

The Company proposes at the outset to purchase a fleet of 30 Motor Omnibusses, of the best and most modern type procurable. The Company's technical representative will at once visit England and America with this object and he will at the same time engage the services of an expert Traffic Superintendent and a Maintenance Superintendent so that the requirements of the Public may be served by officials of adequate and long experience in order to ensure that the operation of the proposed Service shall be as perfect as skilled experience can achieve.

"It is the Company's intention to provide the public with rapid, smooth, regular and comfortable transport at a moderate cost, and it will be the Company's aim to prevent overcrowding and to provide every passenger with a seat.

"The maximum fare permitted by the Council is ten cents per mile for 1st Class accommodation and five cents per mile for 2nd Class accommodation.

"The average length of one Route or single trip is 2.4 miles. The maximum average earnings permitted by the Council tariff are $4.90 per bus per trip. The Company anticipates that no first class fare on any route now authorised will exceed 20 cents or second class fare 10 cents. On this basis if running full time the average earning per Bus per trip will be $4.10.

"Very carefully considered estimates have been drawn up wherein provision has been made for the Busses to operate 12 hours per day carrying only 50 per cent of the maximum seating accommodation; the maximum first class fare has been based on a charge of 5 cents per mile and the maximum second class fare on a charge of five cents per trip, the total average earning capacity of each Bus being taken at $1.18 per trip.

"The busy or rush periods when the Busses will be full have, for the purpose of this calculation, been entirely ignored.

"On a Capital of Tls. 500,000 the amount of the proposed first issue covering the purchase and operation of a fleet of 30 Motor Busses of the most modern design operating on four routes only, and after allowing for all running expenses, and for half the fixed or overhead charges, which have been estimated to cover 10 Routes the investment shows a profit of 11½ per cent per annum.

"Negotiations are in progress with the Council for permission to operate Motor Busses on Special Routes for Special purposes and it is hoped in time to be able to serve the public in the evening by providing special Busses running from Residential Districts to the Theatres, Cinemas, etc.

"With the rapid development of the outlying districts of Shanghai the possibilities of the Company's future activities are almost unlimited. The Promoters are convinced that the Shanghai public will readily welcome the inauguration of this new means of transportation and it will be the Company's constant aim to cater for public requirements and to furnish such good service that demands for extensions of the service will be made within a very short period."

Copies of the full Prospectus and form of Application can be obtained at the office of the Company, 6 Kiukiang Road or from the Company's Solicitors, White-Cooper, Master and Harris, 1 Museum Road.

This notice is not to be regarded as an invitation to the public to subscribe for shares and application will only be received on the footing of the full Prospectus and in the form issued therewith.

Jumping Bean Helps Alma Dance

By Ring Lardner

To the editor:

I would like to say a wd. or 2 in regards to these stories which has appeared in all the papers lately in regards to different gents and ladies breaking the long distance non stop dancing record.

It seems like a man named Cesare Leone started the fad when he triped the light fanatic in gay Paris for something like 24 hrs. but he hadn't no more than began counting his callouses when a bird named Victor Hindmarch over in England went 25 hrs. and 4 minutes before his arches left him flat.

When the news of these 2 wonderful and usefull achievements reached N. Y. they was a indignation meeting amidst the red he-blooded Americans and it was the sence of the meeting that we shouldn't ought to allow not even the marathon dancing championship to be held by foreigners as practally all titles belongs in this country like for inst the gum chewing championship, the long distance cuspidor shooting record, the sustained hiccoughing title and etc.

Well the committee made a personal canvas of the best known male hoofers around the metropolis but couldn't get none of them to volunteer as this is a great corn growing country so finely they had to pick on the gals and found a willing subject in the person of 1 Miss Alma Cummings who dances for a living up to 166th st. and Broadway.

Well, Alma stepped for 27 straight hrs. and everybody was showering her with congratulations and foots ease when another gal who I didn't catch her name went 30 some odd hrs. and made Alma's exploit look like a encore in the 5cts. per dance casino at St. Joe, Michigan.

But Alma comes from Texas where men are men and women are desperate so when this other gal hoofed her way onto Page 1 why Alma couldn't rest till she had tride it again and give the boys and gals somethings to shoot at for all time.

Her 2d. seizure lasted just 50 hrs. and as these wds. is written I ain't heard of no man or woman of either sex but what is perfectly satisfied and personly if I ever go up to 166th st. and should happen to be the only man there why I know one little Texas gal that will half to undergo the pangs of being a wall flower.

Experts of la danse tell me that 50 hrs. is realy a world's record and I suppose it is though I recall a fox trot or 2 in which I took part which seemed that long and my partner was even more emphatic but any way give credit where credit is due has always been my slocum and my feelings towards Miss Cummings is one of wholesome respects untanged by envy.

The only time I wished I was in what is left of her shoes was when I read that she had been given a prize for her performance in the form of a $115 silver cup 3 ft high.

"Just what I needed," said Alma who like all other attractive girls expects to have her own home some day and maybe a few friends will come in for tea.

Now people who is not careful readers of the dancing news may not of saw all the interviews which was given out by Alma and the prop. of the academy where the record was broke and which has also got a restless soul and in the past I have sometimes complained when she jumped up and moved a chair from one corner of the rm. to another for no reason but after this I will just keep my mouth shet and thanks heaven that I don't half to stay up for 50 hrs. at a stretch to change needles.

I don't suppose they's a man in the world that ever danced but what they have had their troubles keeping up a conversation dureing the dance even when their partner was not their wife, so naturally my readers will be curious to know what in the world Alma and the 6 partners talked about for 50 hrs.

Luckly I had a chance to interview 2 of the boys and got a verbatim report of all that was said between them and the 1st. one says he asked her at 3 o'clock Saturday morning if she ever got homesick for Texas and a couple hrs. later she says no, she only had 2 or 3 real friends back there and she hardily ever heard from them.

"Of course it is my fault," she says along about noon. "I guess they would write to me if I would write to them. But you know I am funny that way. I love to get letters but I hate to write them."

The other bird I talked to was her 6th. and last partner and all he said to her was what do you say if we sit this one out. But she had just took a mouthfull of vegetables.

gives a clear inside into her character.

In the 1st. place she is a vegetarian which is a gal that don't eat nothing only vegetables and in this connection it might not be generally known that one of the boys that was invited to join in the relay team who was to take turns dancing with her turned down the invitation on acct. of haveing lerned in school that a onion is a vegetable.

As a matter of fact Alma never touches a onion and her favorite vegetable is jumping beans which she claims helps her in her work.

"I never touch nothing that has to do with animal or fowl," is the way the little woman put it. "I won't drink milk because it comes from a cow and I won't eat eggs because a hen lays them."

Dureing her record breaking dance however she indulged several times in roast peanuts probably not knowing that they had been broughten to the academy by a wagon drawn by a horse.

Alma and the prop. both give evidence that she ain't nothing but just a ordinary home girl only she has got a restless soul which reminds me that they's a ordinary home girl living in my house who

The Breatheable Treatment for Coughs & Colds
Everybody Needs Peps!
Whether it's a Cough, or a Cold, a sudden Chill, Sore Throat, or a revival of the old Bronchitis, the Peps breatheable remedy is most speedily effective.
The Peps way is to strengthen the breathing passages and end the danger before it affects the chest and lungs.
When a Peps tablet dissolves in the mouth powerful medicinal fumes are liberated. As the diagram shows, these chest-strengthening medicines mingle with the air breathed through the nasal cavity (1) and mouth (2) and are carried over the tongue (3) into the throat (4) whence they pass direct down the wind-pipe (5) into the lungs. Druggy cough mixtures and syrups are ineffective because they go down the gullet (6) into the stomach.
The Peps breatheable medicines however deal directly, not only with immediate trouble in the throat and bronchial tubes, but they penetrate to the innermost recesses, where disease germs are likeliest to be.
Peps not only act as a powerful germicide but they speedily soothe and heal any soreness, irritation, or inflammation; they make breathing easy. There is no more valuable safeguard against throat troubles, chest weakness, bronchitis, asthma, pleurisy and pneumonia. Free from opiates and all harmful drugs, Peps are perfectly safe for children.

Hawaii's War On Rats Gains By New Method

Lives and fortunes are the stake in a tremendous war against field rats now being conducted by the territorial board of health and the sugar plantations of the Hawaiian Islands, according to Science Service's Daily Science News Bulletin (Washington). The results of this war, it says, are likely to be of assistance throughout the world in campaigns against the rat, one of the worst enemies of mankind. It is stated by those who have studied the problem at the experiment station of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association that the common field rat destroys sugar-cane on these islands valued at $100,000 each year, and probably the damage is in excess of this sum. Worse than this huge tax on the industry, however, is the danger of bubonic plague from infected rats. Twelve deaths among Japanese and Filipino plantation laborers occurred within the past few months in the Hamakua coast, Island of Hawaii. We read:

A new and successful method for wholesale killing of rats has just been discovered. Poison ratcakes are being manufactured by the millions at Honokaa plantation and are spread broadcast through more than ten thousand acres of cane-fields and waste areas resulting in the death of so many rats that where the board of health previously trapt over two thousand rats a month, it now catches only about fifty.

The poison used is barium carbonate, deadly to rats and field-mice, but only slightly poisonous to human beings, livestock, and poultry. The poison is mixed with flour dough and made into small round cakes less than an inch in diameter and about one-fourth inch thick.

A new and very important feature, for which patents have been applied, is the coating of paraffin over the cakes to protect them from dampness and molding, thus insuring their effectiveness for many months. A very small nibble at one if these poison cakes will kill a mouse, while a piece as large as a small pea will kill a rat. The Honokaa sugar company is manufacturing these rat-cakes chiefly for its own use, but it is also selling some at nominal cost for trial use on other plantations.

A man on horseback, dropping a ratcake about every ten feet, can cover an area of 35 acres in one day, at a total cost of sixteen cents per acre. This done two or three times a year is sufficient to control thoroughly this very serious pest.

Other poisons have been tried at Honokaa. The best of these is strychnin wheat, placed in small bamboo tubes and wrapt with paraffin paper. The usual methods of poisoning are intended for use on a small scale and no effective system has been evolved previously which is cheap enough to use over large areas and impervious to the weather.

Many efforts were made along other lines before poisoning was decided upon as the one effective plan. The U. S. Army stationed in the islands had offered assistance in the way of poison gas experiments, as it realised the seriousness of the plague situation.

C. E. Pemberton, assistant entomologist at the sugar-planters' experiment station was assigned to investigate this possible means of control, but he reported:

"The use of gas in any form for combating rats in the cane-fields is wholly impracticable. Rat burrows, deep, extensive, and permanent, are common, but extremely difficult to find until the cane has been cut and the trash burned. By then the rats have left the burrows. A minute search in any field, before harvesting, would reveal most of the rat burrows present, but the time required for such work would be far too great to warrant such a procedure."

Trapping was also experimented with and found unsuitable for use over so large an area. The board of health is leaving the experimental work to the sugar-planter, and is using its energies in cleaning up rat-infested places in the labor camps. The people of Hamakua are giving the board every assistance in ridding the district of the menace. Camps are being cleaned up, rubbish is being burned, and intensive trapping is conducted around houses and barns. All stray dogs and cats have been killed, as it has been found that they also are capable of carrying the plague.

How FLYOSAN Was Discovered

DURING the late World War, a young man, William F. Plowfield, was chief of Sanitation at the famous Hog Island Shipyard. The place was swarming with disease carrying obnoxious insects. Immediately he set about destroying them. He tried all insecticides that are on the market, but all were imperfect. The powders were mussy to use, the liquid smelled badly or were poisonous to other than insect life. Some preparations would kill flies but not roaches. Some would drive away mosquitoes but failed against bed-bugs.

Mr. Plowfield then started experimenting upon an insecticide which would possess the virtues of other preparations without their known disadvantages. The product now known as "FLYOSAN" was the reward of his long and careful experimentation. Thus FLYOSAN came to be discovered. It is destined to be a big factor in controlling insects all over the world.

FLYOSAN is fatal to every kind of insect while harmless to any other form of life. It has a pleasent aromatic odour which disappears rapidly. It will not permanently stain or harm in any way fabrics, wall paper or furniture.

There has always been a demand for an insecticide which would be universal in its effectiveness yet without the drawbacks which limit the usefulness of those now on the market. Since the war, the Colonial Chemical Corporation has been formed to manufacture FLYOSAN commercially to meet this demand.

OCEAN SECRETS BARED BY NEW DEPTH FINDER

San Francisco.—The precise contour of the Pacific continental shelf from San Francisco Bay to Point Descanso, Mexico, revealed recently in the publication by the Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department of a bathymetric chart, shows the floor of the ocean in a detailed way which will enable mariners hereafter to determine the position of their craft when landmarks are obstructed from view by climatic conditions.

The information is based on a recent cruise made by the destroyers Hull and Corry, employing the recently invented Sonic finder.

The Sonic finder, a device which determines the depth of the ocean by recording the time required for the sound to reach the bottom and re-echo to the ship, takes a 2,000-foot sounding in less than a minute, supplanting a method which required six hours.

Originally undertaken at the request of the Carnegie Institute to aid in finding earthquake faults in the Pacific Ocean, the results obtained by the charting cruise far exceeded the original purpose according to Lieutenant Lyman K. Swenson, of the Navy Department.

Geologists may employ the chart to trace the extension of oil fields, situated on the southern California coast, to submerged prominences in the same vicinity offshore, it is said.

Elaborating the possibilities of such a chart, Lieutenant Swenson said it would enable anthropologists to trace links between continents in order to reach a determination of the manner in which animals migrated to countries which are now separated by oceans.

With the chart as a basis, mariners approaching the California coast could direct their craft, if equipped with the Sonic finder, to any harbor by means of deductions from the finder interpreted by the chart, navy officers said.

The expedition furnished revelations regarding the floor of the ocean off the Pacific Coast which show an eggshaped, submerged prominence on the bed of the Pacific Ocean at a point thirty miles southwest of the Farallone islands, off the Golden Gate entrance of San Francisco Bay.

The chart also shows that if San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean were pumped down 100 fathoms (600 feet), the coast line would be removed thirty miles from the Golden Gate straits and connect with the Farallones.

Off the coast of southern California the ocean is spotted with depressions and contours resembling a land condition of mountains and lakes. This condition obtains in a line with the oil fields off the coast of Santa Barbara County.

How To Enamel Your Furniture

When enameling furniture, the actual enameling is the last step in the process, not the first. Enamel is almost transparent, and therefore will not cover up scratches nor soiled spots unless they have been made ready to receive it. The first step in this preparation is to wash well with soap and water the article that is to be enameled, then sandpaper it. Now, with a soft camel's hair brush, apply to all scratches and bad spots some flat white paint which has been well stirred. This flat white paint dries quickly without gloss. When the first application is dry, go over the entire article with another coat of flat white. If this coat does not cover all the discolorations and scratches, sandpaper them again and apply a mixed coat of flat white and enamel to hide them perfectly. When this coat is dry and hard, it is ready for the last or finishing coat of pure enamel. This should also be applied with the brush. If a glossy surface is wanted, the work may now be considered finished, but if a dull or "rubbed" surface is preferred, mix some powered pumice stone and cold water together and rub this all over the article with a piece of felt or very soft cloth.

Poem Written On Relativity 50 Years Ago

Madrid.—Many centuries ago a philosopher of long, wide and deep experience declared that there was nothing new under the sun. Doubtless, in accordance with his own principle, that saying was not original with him, but had been made long before. So it seems to be with the scientific theory of "relativity," which has been exploited by Professor Einstein, and which is commonly regarded as his invention.

It is known that Nordman, in his recent book, maintains that the inventor of the theory of relativity was no other than the celebrated mathematician, Poincare. But, by referring to page 100 of the seventy-second volume of the Diamante collection, published thirty years ago in Barcelona and Madrid, entitled "Versos y Prosa," it is found that the poet J. M. Bartrina (1850-1880) has formulated it there—and the matter is half a century old!—exactly the thesis which is making so much noise in our days.

EXTRACT FROM WORK

Here is the text of this extraordinary anticipation of science, freely translated in rhythm:

. . . "Everybody now is growing
Forty meters every second,"
Said a madman to a savant
Visiting the Insane Asylum.
Hearing such a crazy statement,
Grossly common sense affronting,
Straightway answered him the savant,
With a worthy zeal intending
To rebuke him for his error.
All in vain! The crazy fellow
Cut him short with this reminder:
"If all things our sight embraces
Grow in ratio as our eyes grow,
To our eyes is nothing growing!"
Pondered then the learned savant
On the logic of the madman.
"If in an exact proportion
All things constantly are growing,
Then perpetually equal
Would remain the constant ratio
'Twixt the measured and the measure."

HISTORY OF BARTRINA

Bartrina has not been appreciated by Spanish critics. They see in him chiefly the author of a pessimistic and bitter collection entitled "Algo" (1876). In reality, the essential originality of this Barcelonian consists, not in the fact that he popularised in Spain the pessimism of Leconte de Lisle, but in his endeavor to introduce into the Spanish Parnassus, by means of a personal poetry, the physiological and mechanical sciences. If he had done nothing more than to formulate with clearness the precise idea which serves as a basis to the Einstein theories, he would be entitled to immority. . . . .

To satisfy bibliographers it may be added that the volume cited bears the exact title "Obras en prosa y verso"; that the author of this posthumous selection of Bartrina's works is J. Cardo (Barcelona—Madrid, 1881), that in "L'Ilustracion Espanola y Americana" of 1883, page 273, may be found a study of Barthe on the works of Bartrina, and finally that Don J. Roca y Roca published in Barcelona, in 1916, under the title: "Memoria biografica de Joaquin Maria Bartrina y d'Aixemus," an interesting essay on the life of this poet-philosopher.

Thirst For Education Curbs Gypsy Wander

London, (by mail).—A new page has been written in the history of gypsies in England, owing to the first known Romany letter sent the London press, by Fenella Smith. The object of this communication is to defend the tribe from the charge that they are "ugly, dirty, half idiotic."

Fenella Smith herself is a gifted woman, deeply versed in Borrow, gypsy lore, and claiming descent from the Petulengro family, mentioned in Borrow's books, which to gypsies is what Norman blood is to the aristocratic English families.

"Princess" Smith contends that real gypsies are handsome, clean, as clever as their critics, and gives evidence that the mysterious vagabond race is changing its traditional habits under the influence of the modern thirst for knowledge. Nowadays in gypsy camps here, her letter continues, it is not unusual to find the mother squatting beside her caravan, teaching the swarthy brood of children to read and write.

Ban On Lurid Divorce Reports In Press Urged

London.—The spectacle of long lines of women and men waiting for admission to the courts to hear divorce proceedings and the publication of the lurid details of the evidence, long a feature, in English newspapers, will be prohibited if a suggestion in the House of Lords by Lord Buckmaster, former Lord High Chancellor, is carried out.

Urging that nothing in regard to divorce suits except announcement of the results should be published, Lord Buckmaster said: "The one great scandal connected with these reports is that they pillory the innocent party."

Viscount Cave, the Lord High Chancellor, in reply declared the real question was how the improvident could be brought about without improperly violating the freedom of the press.

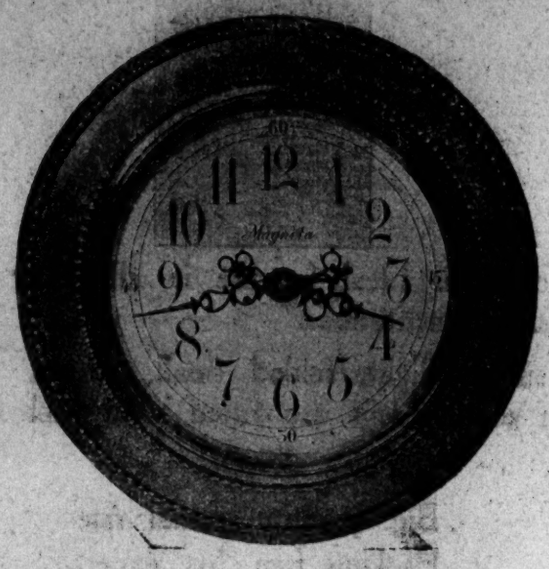
MAGNETA

Electric Time Keeping System



MAGNETA electric time keeping system is the only electric system clock in which the current for driving the secondary clocks is generated in the master clock itself. The time keeping accuracy of the clocks is therefore not influenced by battery troubles or interruption of outside current, which are the two principal sources of trouble with other makes of electric clocks

MAGNETA time keeping system can be installed in places where no electric current exists, as in that case it suffices to wind up the master clock by hand every 24 hours to drive up to 600 secondary clocks.

Where electric current is available, we supply Magnetic master clocks with automatic winding. This means the master clock if wound up automatically every 24 hours: all master clocks have a reserve strength of 12 hours to keep the secondary clocks going in case the outside current should be interrupted at the moment the master clock is timed to be wound up automatically. If the current should be interrupted for longer than 12 hours, which rarely happens, the master clock can still be wound up by hand thus avoiding any interruption in the working of either master or secondary clocks. Imagine what it means to you having as many as 600 clocks in various parts of your building or compound, all showing exactly the same accurate time and running for weeks, months and years without needing any attention on your part.

MAGNETA master clocks can be supplied with signal device that means with a device that works bells or other alarm signal at certain given hours of the day or night. This advantage is obvious for factories, schoools etc.

Tower clocks can be supplied in place of ordinary master clocks to drive up to 600 secondary clocks.

Secondary clocks can be connected within a radius of 20 miles from the master cloek.

We can deliver MAGNETA time keeping system connected with workmen's time checking apparatus, the number of worker's time-keeping cards being practically unlimited.

MAGNETA secondary clocks can be supplied in any size from 8 dial up. They can be had with light or dark wooden frames, metal frames, for either indoor or outdoor, or if sufficient time is allowed, we can make special frames for secondary clocks to suit the particular requirements of our customers. Secondary clocks can be supplied one faced for walls, double-faced for mounting on brackets, or three and four faced for mounting on street kiosks, etc.

For any concern, needing 25 clocks or more, MAGNETA time keeping system costs no more than ordinary clocks, and which can never, under the best circumstances, give you the same service as MAGNETA clocks.

Owing to the manufacturers being booked well ahead, we recommend placing your orders as early as possible in order to ensure early shipment.

Study the enclosed list, showing some of the users of MAGNETA clocks is England U. S. A. and Canada. This list is not complete, being over 2 years old and a large number of new and satisfied customers are added from month to month.

Your building may be modern in all its details, but it will never be complete without the MAGNETA time keeping system.

Please telephone or write us, and our representative will call to study your requirements and submit you estimates free of charge.

Hashimura Togo

BY WALLACE IRWIN

OFF WITH THE DANCE!

To Editor ....., whose Brain are often wakeful while his Feet are asleep.

Dearest Sir;

I am now bedriding in a Criminal Hospital where I lay there enjoying great pain all over my skeleton. Cause of this are Japanese Marathon Perpetual Waltzing Contest which give val. prize to persons too foolish to stop. This rude combat of legs are still going on perhapsly. I cannot tell because I have bruised my mind attempting to waltz a fox-step 24 hrs. executively while eating soft boiled eggs, taking a bath and writing home to my mother. This was how.

Of recently I got very in love with Miss Kiku-san, Japanese menicure lady, who expect to marry me and will do so, by golly, unless I get myself drowned in a burry.

Last Wedsdy @ 3 a.m. in the morn my Talefone go jang-jang by my bed until my ear awoke and answered. I knew by pecurious behavior of Hon. Talefone that he was doing wrong some way. And what could I hear? Distantly Jolly Widow Waltz were doing so while going round and round and round.

"O'hell-o" I holla. "Who there if anybody?"

Then I hear that sweethearted voice of Miss Kiku-san, full of aches & music;

"One-two-three and
One-two-three—
Hallo, Togo,
Won't you gogo
To a drug sore C. Q. D.
Buy a quart of witch haz-el,
Arnika & saltz to smell,
Headache powders half a pound,
Sticking plaster to wind round—
Hey! Wake up; you dancing oxion.

Murder! Help! You're on my bunion!"

Silences.

"O, Miss Kiku-san, sweet delicacy of Japanese," I narrate, "what else can I do to save life?"

"Bring 6 phonograft records, a qt. of Gin and a fresh doctor round to Samurai Enjoyment Dancing Parlor," she snagget sickly.

"O love!" I report. "Are you dying?"

"No, I am dancing," she report and faint off.

Mr. Editor, in time of peace prepare for something still worse. You would admire me more if you saw the speedy haste with which I hire a tax-cab (American jinriksha) and elope to Samurai Enjoyment club with a doctor & all other medicines. And what did I see there? Music, going through windows and up roof. All Japanese Sport Society was standing in circles looking at their watch while in central middle of the floor was a lady, making geisha movements while being held in place by Arthur Kikahajama, Japanese undertaker. Because she wore a Turkish rug, rubber boots and a bedwear cap I did not at first recoknise it was Her. Yet it was. My Dolling, my Kiku-san!

All that time Hon. Phonograft were playing something about Cotton Threads among the Silk while a nursegirl dance behind Kiku, combing her hairs and making her all comfortable for bed.

"Horrus!" I corrode. "Cannot something be invented to stop my Kiku before she kick to death?"

"Why should we stop her?" require Solomon Zero, Japanese horsedoctor, "She have just completed 94th hour. In two days she will burst the record made by Miss Dottie McCallus of the Peoria Home for Feeble Minded."

"Could she not do that without dancing?" I ask to know. But too much excitement for reply.

"Collapse!! With crossed feet like a broken mule Hon. Arthur Kickahajama skid to floor & remain there praying to Japanese idols of his acquaintance.

"Poor Woakfish!" snarrel Miss Kikusan while putting rubber boot in his eye. "You have only danced since Saturday, yet you seem quite wore out. Why should all my partners take the pleasure out of joy!"

With those warmed words she ate 2 Frankfather sausages and changed her stockings while dancing. Then she dance under photo-box where Hon. Photographer shoot her twice while 8 reporters dance around with the Hystery of her Life. Pretty soonly she dance under shower-bath, dance through the weaness and emerj looking beautiful as the dawn on a morning when it is raining hard.

In meanwhile Hon. Arthur Kickajama were being dragged off by the corners of his legs.

"Are there no Japanese manhood any more?" she narrel. This aroush my sportsman blood.

"Here I are, Miss Kiku-san!" I report distinctually.

"Then bring a bottle of witch hazzle & come on!" she snagger. The next know I was in her arms.

I will now tell you what happen by rounds:

First Six Hours. I felt no worse than several seasickness I have enjoyed.

Two Hours Later. "Rubb witch hazzel on my left legg," she deplore sofly. I are too much of a gentleman to help a lady thusly.

That Afternoon. Hon. Police make rade. Sensations. "You are under arrest for impersonating 2 Nutts without a license." Hon. Police dance with us so we can all keep time.

In Jail Wagon. Hon. Sergant Whissle There Is Smiles That Makes You Happy, while we continue to trot foxes. Top of my spine broke off and come through my collar. I tuck it back and kept on. Miss Kiku-san look very fresh, except for her face, which did not.

Arrival to Jail. Hon. Desk Sgt. dance out with Crime Register for us to sign. Behind Hon. Bars all murderers, boot-leggers, bankers & other residence join in our happy chemise-step. "Dance them up to Court," dib Hon. Sergt, "and be careful they do not stopp, because a World's Record might be destroyed."

The courtroom it was crowded, Mr. Editor.

All Sport Society of Samurai Enjoyment club had good seats holding watches. So up mane isle we dance to high-box where Hon. Judge set looking very legal.

"Do you mean say," he ask frownishily, "that these 2 poor people are compelled to dance without the least music? We should not be cruel to prisoners. Send for Patrolliman Shine & his Sacks O' Phone!"

So Hon. Shine play tune to resemble Philadelphia Blues while Hon. Judge took extended look with his high-powered face. I faint twice, but Miss Kikusan hold me by hair so I will not die before she does.

"Where did you find Those?" require Hon. Judge with Landis expression.

"In a fowl roof where they been stoggering around to music for six (6) days, Yonna," report Hon. Police.

"Which is the man and which is the woman?" narrate his Courtship.

"The one with rubber boots are Female, they say," renig Hon. Bluepants.

"Have she danced continuously for 6 days?"

"She only stopp once to pick up 2 teeth," narrate Hon. Constibble.

"Hum!" Hon. Judge said that. "Have anybody ever heard anything more fool?"

"I have!". This from me with dying breath.

"What could be?"

"Hon. Wm. Jenny Bryan on Evolution."

"Hum!" report Hon. Judge for encore. "I did not think that folks like you could talk. I suspected you skweeked and ran up tree. There must be a prize of very rich value offered to persons to make them dance 6 days. What is it in this case?"

"A German silver ash tray, Yonna," report Miss Kiku-san, hawling me back & 4th with chemise-step.

"That will be sifficiently," dib His Courtship. "Thirty days for you."

"Shux," say my Kiku while cing away to cellar dept. "At this rates I am good for 40."

Hoping you are the same.

Yours truy,
HASHIMURA TOGO.

Australia Actively Conserving Water

Great activity is being displayed in Australia in furthering the work of water conservation. The harnessing of the Murray River is a mammoth enterprise on the part of the Federal Government working in conjunction with the State Administrations of Victoria, New South Wales and South Australia.

The Murray River Commission has decided upon a substantial increase in the estimates for the financial year, 1923-24, involving an expenditure of £1,039,000. The works at present in course of construction consist of the Hume reservoir, the weir and lock at Torrumbarry, near Echuca; the Lake Victoria storage, and weirs and three locks below Wentworth. Every effort is being made by the constructing authorities for New South Wales and Victoria to expedite construction of the Hume reservoir, which, when completed, will rank as the fourth largest storage in the world. It is recognised that completion of this storage is of the greatest importance to irrigation settlements, established along the river. The work is proceeding on both sides of the river, and up to date an expenditure of £650,000 has been incurred. Up to the end of January, 1923, the total expenditure incurred on the works completed and under construction amounted to £1,750,000.

Mr. Dooley On Socialism

BY FINLEY PETER DUNNE

(Saturday night at Mr. Dooley's Mr. Dooley in the chair. Present Mr. Larkin and Mr. McKenna. Present but not voting, Mr. Hennessey and Mr. Schwartzmeister.)

"Socialism is sweepin' like a wave over th' counthry," said Mr. Larkin, the radical black-smith.

"It hasn't wet my feet yet," said Mr. McKenna (rep.)

"But Matthew is right," said Mr. Dooley. "He's right about it. A few days ago Mulligan wud've r-run me in because I didn't sind me ballot to th' bank to be endorsed befure I cud use it. Today Mulligan is prisidint iv th' Polisman's Binivolent Hammer th' Milliyonaires assocyation, an' ivry time he passes Dorgan's bank he throws his club in the air like a dhrum major.

"It was diff'rent in the goolden days. A gr-reat chancst a socialist had thin. If annybody undherstood him he was kilt be infuryated wurrkinmen. It was a good thing f'r him that he on'y spoke German, which is a language not gin'rally known among cultivated people, Schwartzmeister.

"They used to hold their meetin's in a cellar in Wintworth avnoo an' th' meetin' was most always followed be an outin' in th' pathrol wagon. 'Twas wan iv th' spoorts to go down to see th' Brotherhood iv Man rushed off in the on'y municipal ownership conveyance we had in thim days, an' havin their spectacles busted by th' hardy an loyal polis.

"'Tis far diff'rent now. No cellars f'r th' Brotherhood iv Man, but Mrs. Vanderhankerbilk give a musical soree f'r th' ladies iv th' Female Billyonaire Arbeiter Verein at he illigant mansion yisterday afthernoon. "Th' futmen were dhressed in th' costume iv th' French rivolution, an' tea was served in imitation bombs.

"Th' meetin' was addhressed be th' well-known socialist leader, J. Cecil Lumley, heir to th' Lumley millyons. This well-known prolytariat said he had become a socialist through studyin' his father. He cud not believe that a system was right which allowed such a man to accumylate tee hundherd millyon dollars. had frequently thried to inthit this vin'rable mossback in dusthreel questions, an' all he replied was: 'Get th' money.'

"Th. adies prisint cud appreciate how foolish th' captains iv industhree are, because they were married to thim an' knew what they looked like in th' mornin'.

"Th' time had come whin a fierce blow must be shruck f'r human freedom. In conclusion, he wud sing th' 'Marsellaisy,' an' accompany himself on a guitar.

"Th' hostess followed with a few remarks. She said socialists were not dhreamers, but practical men. Socialism was not a question iv th' hour, but had come to stay as an afthernoon intertainmint. It was less expinsive thin bridge, an' no wan cud call ye down f'r ladin' out iv th' wrong hand. She had made up her mind that ivrybody must do something f'r th' cause.

"It was wrong f'r her to have other people wurrukin' f'r her, an' she intinded to free or bounce her servants an' go to live at a hotel. She wud do her share in th' wurruld's wurruk, too' an' with this in view she was takin' lessons in minichure paintin'.

"A lady prisint asked Mr. Lumley wud large hats be worn undher socialism. He answered no, but th' more becomin' toque; but he wud look th' matther up in a book be Karl Marx that he undherstood was an authority on these subjects. Th' meetin' thin adjourned afther passin' a risolution callin' on th' husband iv th' hostess to go an' jump in th' river.

"An' there ye ar're, boys. Socialism is no longer talked to ye in Platt Doitch, but whispered fr'm behind an ivory fan.

"It's betther that way. I prefer to have it in a goblet all iv goold fr'm fair hands to takin' it out iv a can. Ye can't make anny new idee too soft f'r me. If I had me way I'd get thim to put it to music an' have it danced befure me. It suits me betther th' way it is thin whin Schulz screened a Schwabian account iv it through his whiskers.

"'What d'ye want to do?' says I. 'To make all men akel,' says he.

"'Akel to who?' says I think ye mane akel to me, I'm agreeable,' I says. 'I tire iv bein' supperyor to th' rest iv th' race,' says I. 'But,' says I, 'if ye mane akel to ye,' says I, 'I'll throuble ye to take ye'rsilf off,' says I.

"But suppose you did get socialism, what would you do?" asked Mr. McKenna (rep.).

"Bebel says——" began Mr. Schwartzmeister.

"Shut up, Schwartz," said Mr. Larkin. "Th' first thing we'd do wud be to take all th' money in th' wurruld an' throw it into th' lake."

"Not my money," said Mr. McKenna.

"Yes, ye're's an' ivrybody else's," said Mr. Larkin.

"Mine wuddent make much iv a splash," said Mr. Hennessy.

"Hush," said Mr. Larkin. "Thin we'd set ivry wan to wurruk at somthing."

"What wurruk wud ye put us at?" asked Mr. McKenna.

"Liebnicht says——," began Mr. Schwartzmeister.

"Niver mind what he says," said Mr. Larkin. "Ivry man wud wurruk at what plazed him."

"But suppose no wurruk plazed him," said Mr. Dooley and Mr. McKenna at once.

"He'd starve," said Mr. Larkin.

"He wud," said Mr. Dooley.

"Well," said Mr. McKenna, after some thought. "I choose to feed th' swans in Lincoln park."

"Ye cudden't," said Mr. Larkin. "Ye wudden't be let. Whin ye'er case come up I'd be called in as an expert an' I'd sind th' good woman over to th' govermint hat store f'r th' loan iv a stove-pipe, jump on a govermint sthreet car r-run be me cousin an' go down to th' city hall or govermint intillijence office. Afther shakin' me warmly be th' hand an' givin' me a govermint stogy to smoke, th' mayor wud say: 'Little Jawnny McKenna is a candydate f'r feedin' th' swans in Lincoln park. He has O'Brien an' a sthrong dillygation behind him, but what I want to know is, is he fitted f'r th' job?' 'I'm afraid not,' says I. 'He hasn't got th' requisite touch. But if ye want an expert hand f'r th' wheelbarrow at th' govermint rollin'-mills, he's just th' good, sthrong, noor fellow f'r th' sinycure,' says I. An' th' nex' day at sivin o'clock they'd be a polisman at th' dure an' ye'd be put in handcuffs an' dhragged off to th' slag pile. An' maybe I wudden't break ye'er back! F'r I'd be ye'er boss. I'm wan iv th' original old-time socialists, an' to th' victor belongs th' spoils, be hivens."

"You'd not be my boss then any more than you are now, me boy," said Mr. McKeena, warmly.

"In Chermany——" began Mr. Schwartzmeister.

"Dhry up," said Mr. Larkin. "Ye mustn't feel bad, Jawn. Ye wudden't have to wurruk long. About 8 o'clock Martin's shift wud come on, ye'd make a date to meet me at th' govermint baseball game, take off ye'er overalls, jump into ye'er autymobil an' dash over to what used to be Martin's place, but is now a government dispinsary, where an uncle iv mine wud give ye a glass iv malt free, d'ye mind, f'r undher socialism a prolytariat cud have his beer." th,'1'5fa

"Hooray!" said Mr. Hennessey.

"Thin ye'd run over to ye'er iligant brownstone mansion in Lake Shore dhrive, beautifully furnished be th' govermint; a govermint dressmaker wud be thryin' a new dhress on ye'er wife, a letther carrier wud be milkin' a governmint cow on th' back lawn, an' all ye'd have to do f th' rest iv th' day wud be to smoke ye'er pipe an' play on th' accorjeen."

"It sounds good," said Mr. McKenna. "But——"

"Keep quiet," said Mr. Dooley. "Ye mustn't monopolise th' conversation, Schwartz. It's gettin' to be a habit with ye. I must tell ye f'r ye'er own good. Give somebody else a chance wanst in a while. What were ye goin' to say, Jawn?"

"I wasn't goin' to say annything," said Mr. McKenna. "What's th' use arguing against a balloon accension? The grand old republican party, under such leaders as——"

"Ye needn't mintion thim" said Mr. Dooley, "until this month's grand jury has adjourned. But ye'er right. Th' grand ol' raypublican party will take care iv this matther. A raypublican is born ivry minyit, an' they will niver allow money bearin' th' sacred image iv Columbya to be dhrowned in th' lake.

"It's no use argyin' agin' socialism, an' be th' same token it's no use argyin' f'r it. Afther listenin' to Larkin an' his talkative German frind here, I don't know anny more about it thin I did refure. Schwartzmeister's idee iv it is that ivry man shall live in a story an' a half house, wear a unyform with a cock's feather in th' hat, an' dhraw his pay in soup tickets fr'm th' govermint.

"Larkin is lookin' forward to a chance to get even with his boss. That's his idee iv an industhreel hiven.

"Th' Lord knows I'd rejoice to see th' day whin Hinnissy wud be shakin' a throwel fr'm th' top iv a wall an' yellin' 'Mort!' at Jawn D. scramblin' barelegged up a ladder, or mesilf lyin' back on a lounge afther a hard day's wurruk writin' pothry f'r th' govermint, ordherin' th' king iv England to bring me a poached egg an' a cup iv tay, an' be quick about it, darn ye.

"But I'm afraid it won't happen in our day. That alone wud make me a socialist. I'm sthrong f'r anny rivolution that ain't goin' to happen in me day.

"But th' thruth is, me boy, that nawthin' happens, annyhow. I see gr-reat changes takin' place ivry day, but no change at all ivry fifty years.

"What we call this here counthry iv ours pretinds to want to thry new experiments, but a sudden change gives it a chill. It's been to th' circus an' bought railroad tickets in a hurry so often that it thinks quick change is short change.

"Whin I take me mornin' walk an' see little boys an' girls with their dinner pails on their arms goin' down to work I'm the hottest socialist ye iver see. I'd be annything to stop it. I'd be a raypublican, even. But whin I think how long this foolish old buildin' has stood, an' how manny a good head has busted again' it, I begin to wondher whether 'tis anny use f'r ye or me to thry to bump it off th' map.

"Larkin here says ta' capitalist system is made up iv th' bones iv billions iv people, like wan iv thim coral reefs that I used to think was pethrified sponge. If that is so, maybe th' on'y thing I can do about it is to plant a few geeranymus, injye thim while I live, an' thin conthribute me own busted shoulder blades f'r more cappytalists to walk on."

"But ye don't think th' prisint sysem is right, do ye?" Mr. Larkin demanded.

"All I can say about th' prisint system," said Mr. Dooley, "is that wherever it is an' whativer it is, so far, so far, mind ye, it's up to date."

Mind Floating In Space Gets Look At Future

Paris—A passionate interest is taken here in all questions of occultism and "metaphysical" phenomena; this mysterious borderland of science exerts an enormous attraction on all classes of Paris society. Spiritualistic seances and octoplastic phenomena are not the only subjects of scientific research, but dominate conversation alike in the salons and the servants' rooms. Of the so-called "intellectual" phenomena of occultism, telepathy and clairvoyance the veil of the mystery already has been a little removed. A few facts of telepathy—whether it be the question of action at distance in space or in time—cannot be denied. But now it even appears as though proofs can be furnished of a possibility of a look into the future.

GLIMPSES INTO FUTURE

Paul Heuze, who is considered an authority in the domain of occultism, has on this subject made to a contributor of "Le Matin" the following statement: "Although we cannot speak yet of exact proofs, still the essay of Dr. Osty, 'The Subnormal Consciousness,' indicates a considerable step forward."

According to Dr. Osty, the "abnormal consciousness" encompasses not only the past and present but also the future. Thus for instance, a clairvoyantly gifted person tells the experimenter "I see you in the street, you are in danger of death; I hear an awful noise, but you are in health and uninjured. Lying stretched across the way I see a groaning and bleeding man. He is surrounded by strange objects which I cannot recognise distinctly."

A year later the gentleman to whom this had been foretold had an automobile accident. A drunken baker, who drove a wagon, caused a collision. With a fearful noise the auto was demolished but its occupant suffered no injury. On the other hand the baker lay across the road, groaning in his blood.

BIG POSSIBILITIES BARED

"This," says Dr. Osty, "seems to me a proof of the possibility of a look into the future." The metaphysical significance of this possibility is immense, as the lack of freedom of the human will would be proved. For, if everything is predestined, then no effort of will can change anything. But M. Heuze is for the time being not interested in the metaphysical consequence of this question.

Experiments, such as here described by M. Heuze and which in many cases have been verified by Dr. Osty, are also in Vienna the subject of lively scientific discussions, and they have even attempted to put telepathic facilities into the service of the police for the disclosure of crimes.

IF YOU ARE PALE TRY THIS EXPERIMENT.

The Results Will Agreeably Surprise You.

If you are pale, have lost appetite and feel weak and depressed take, after each meal, one of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In a very short time you will be agreeably surprised at the improvement in your health and spirits. You will realise that new blood, rich and red, is flowing through your veins, and you will say, "I actually feel hungry," while your friends will say to you, 'How much better you look!" The reason is that

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS make the rich red blood of health and this good blood restores the appetite, gives fresh strength to the digestion, revitalises the nerves, imparts new life to the whole system.

Medicine vendors everywhere sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, or post free $1.50 per bottle $8 for 6 bottles, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

PRATT'S MOTOR SPIRITS

Tells Of Development In The 'Vacuum' Tube

BY W. C. WHITE
(Research Laboratory, General Electric Co.)

Vacuum tubes are the heart of modern radio equipment both for transmission and reception; and developments in radio communication have to a great extent been dependent upon or closely connected with advancement in vacuum tube design and manufacture.

The many functions performed by vacuum tubes are well illustrated by the fact that in a large broadcasting station, such as W. G.Y. the Schenectady, New York station of the General Electric Company, six different types of vacuum tubes and a total of nearly two dozen in all are employed, all directly used in the transmitting of the broadcast programs.

The vacuum tubes that radio enthusiasts used only a few years ago resemble but slightly those used today and almost certainly those in use a number of years from now will again show marked improvement.

ALWAYS MYSTERIOUS

For some reason vacuum tubes have always had a sort of lure for the radio enthusiast and a certain element of mystery. They are just as interesting and on occasions just as mysterious to those of us who are working on their development.

But few probably realise how every part of metal in these tubes is seriously studied and its relative position to some other part carefully worked out so as to give the best result in use or an arrangement most satisfactorily manufactured.

A few months ago a Sunday edition of the New York Times carried an editorial entitled "Radiotron." A few paragraphs selected from this interesting editorial follow:

"It was a German philologist before the war who counted the words in the principal modern languages and found that English has 260,000 in its vocabulary. German came next with 80,000 words, then Italian with 75,000, French with 30,000, Turkish with 22,500 and Spanish with 20,000. The Figaro was quick to contend that size of vocabulary does not imply literary excellence. What is indicated, however, is the 'expansive quality' of the English language. It has grown and spread to the needs of two-thirds of the civilised population of the earth. And as the language of the radio center of the world, it is certain to spread still further.

NEW WORD ADDED

"To this spacious language America has just added a word which may come to be one of the most potent, in what it connotes, of all the new words in the English tongue. The Scientific parents of the bit of apparatus to which this new name was given at one time had about decided to christen it 'pliotron.' Some of the neighbors called it a 'triode valve', others just plain 'electron tube.' But at last the name 'radiotron' was compounded, and so the tube of copper and glass was named after both 'radio' and 'electron' as godfather and godmother of the prodigy. One would like to find in the 'tron' a memory of an old dialect English and Scotch word, now obsolete, 'tron' or 'trone,' meaning a trench or a trough; for is not this tube a trench of radiant but noiseless energy? At any rate, here is a new word 'native-born of foreign parentage.'"

It is sometimes considered that a trade mark such as Radiotron is merely of advertising value as indicating the origin of the device; it has, however, I believe, another function just as pronounced and possibly of even more value. This important function is the feeling of interest and pride the name promotes in all those connected in any way with the production of the article, and this factor is undoubtedly a powerful incentive in developing and maintaining a product of good quality.

OF ALL SIZES

There are Radiotrons of all sizes from the small Model UV-199, a three inch long receiving tube, operating from dry cells, up to powerful transmitting tubes of twenty kilowatts output, a foot and a half long and costing several hundred dollars. There are at the present time more than ten types of standardised radiotron tubes designed to meet the various requirements of radio transmission and reception.

The two newest members of this progressive vacuum tube family are the radiotron UV-201-A and the radiotron UV-199. These tubes are a great improvement over their predecessors due to their much lower filament consumption and improved operating characteristics. The UV-201-A tube is particularly suitable for the radio experimenter who already has a vacuum tube receiving equipment using several tubes of the older tungsten filament type operated from a storage battery. The substitution of these new UV-201-A tubes will not only give improved results in several respects, but reduces to one-fourth the current drain from the storage battery. The UV-199, the very latest addition to the Radiotron family, is unique in many respects and incorporates the very latest development of the art. It is particularly suitable for those who do not already have or do not care to purchase a storage battery for filament operation. The filament energy required is considerably less than that taken by any other vacuum tube in use today, and only about one-half that required by the little bulb of the vest-pocket flashlight. The electrical rating of its filament is three volts and only sixty milliamperes. The filaments of one to four of these tubes may be operated satisfactorily from three standard six-inch dry cells connected in series.

MAKE COLLECTION

For some time past, we have been making a collection of vacuum tubes to illustrate the development of this interesting art. A number of years from now such a collection will be of great interest and of considerable historical value.

We would like to ask radio fans to assist us in making more complete this vacuum tube collection.

It is natural, however, that we are only desirous of obtaining additions to this collection and, therefore, are interested only in tubes of other than General Electric manufacture. What we desire to obtain are tubes of very early manufacture, tubes of unusual design and those of other countries, particularly Italian, Japanese and German. It is not essential that these tubes be in operating condition. The filament may be burned out or the vacuum impaired, but they should be in satisfactory mechanical condition.

If any radio fan has such vacuum tubes, I shall be very glad to have them write me, describing their tubes briefly.

Famine Commission Has Technical Board

A technical board composed of leading engineers of many nationalities has been organised by the China International Famine Relief Commission and its first meeting was held at the offices of the Commission in Peking on the afternoon of June 4, according to a report just received from the commission headquarters. Mr. F. C. Rose of the Chihli River Commission was elected chairman. The convening of this board marks a forward step in the efficient prosecution of famine relief and prevention schemes whose chief aspects are of a technical nature.

The meeting was opened by the Executive Secretary of the Commission who explained that since the adoption of the principle that wherever possible famine funds should be disbursed in return for labor on public utilities, the technical aspects of relief work are becoming increasingly important and it was hoped that the work of the Board would result not only in co-ordinating the various projects which are under way throughout the provinces, but in elevating the engineering standards of the various schemes. It was also pointed out that future famines when large funds will be available for expenditure will find the Commission unprepared with adequate projects unless the interim between disasters is utilised in studying and preparing suitable plans, the execution of which may be achieved by famine labor.

BOARD TO DECIDE

This Technical Board whose members are volunteering their service because of the humanitarian aspects of famine relief work, will be the final authority on all questions of an engineering nature which must be decided by the China International Famine Relief Commission. The members of the board are: Mr. F. C. Rose, chairman; Mr. C. J. Carroll, Mr H. Harai, Mr. Z. Y. Chow, Mr. G. Bouillard, Mr. Yang Pao-ling, Mr. H. Van der Voon, Mr. T. Pincione Mr. H. Von Heidenstam.

International famine relief committees in Shantung, Kiangsu, Chekiang, Anhwei and Hupeh have recently been visited by Mr. Y. S. Djang, Associate Executive Secretary of the China International Famine Relief Commission. Mr. Djang has just completed the tour, having been on the road for eight weeks.

The purpose of the trip was mainly to make personal acquaintances of the leading members of the various committees which are either directly or indirectly affiliated with the China International Famine Commission. Incidentally a tour of this nature gave the Secretary an opportunity to visit the various labor-relief projects undertaken by those committees and to get first-hand information of the famine prevention measures under consideration or under construction.

YELLOW RIVER DYKE

At Kungchiakou, Shantung, Mr. W. H. Mallory and Mr. Djang visited the works of the Asia Development Company, contractors for the repair of the Yellow River Dyke and digging of an auxiliary channel. They also examined the roads and dykes already built by the Shantung Committee in 1920 and years following.

Mr. Djang went further south and spent about two weeks with the Chinese Foreign Famine Relief Committee of Shanghai. He proceeded to Chekiang where he spent ten days in the cities and flooded villages, to acquire information on the existing conditions in that region.

After a visit to Ningpo, Mr. Djang went on to Anking where he was received with the highest cordiality by the officials and people, who claimed there is another famine in Anhwei this year, although Dr. Djang has yet failed to secure similar reports originating from the foreign sources. Mr. Djang returned to Peking by way of Hankow.

Czar Tells How Grand Duke Nicholas In Tears Offered To Resign After Defeats

BY ISAAC DON LEVINE

Czar Nicholas's elation over the successes of the Russian armies in Galicia in 1915 that culminated with the fall of Przemysl, the great Galician fortress, was short lived. Within the next three months—the period covered by his letters in this installment—the Czar saw the Galician victories turned into disasters by a mighty Austro-German counter offensive that drove the Russian armies out of their captured territory and hurled them back through Galicia with terrific losses. And by early July he faced the grave menace of massed offensives from the enemy that staggered the Russian battle line in Poland and northward to the Baltic.

Nicky paid one happy visit to the conquered territory in Galicia, but soon his letters to the Czarina were telling of enormous casualties, of generals who were stripped of their commands because they failed to obey orders to fortify vital rear positions, of fatal lack of ammunition and many other amazing inner details of the occurrences behind the crumbling Russian front during those catastrophic weeks.

Grand Duke Nicholas came to him in tears, ready to resign the supreme command, but the Czar kept him in power with further disastrous results. There was growing proof of treachery and pro-German intrigue among high officials of the Russan bureaucracy. General Sukhomlinoff, the Minister of War, who later was accused of responsibility for the ammunition shortage and convicted of high treason, was deposed. Yet when General Danilloff, chief aide of Grand Duke Nicholas, was charged with being a spy, Nicky waved aside the accusation as "not worth a straw."

Thus the end of the first year of the Great War found Russia's cause in a critical plight, its army reduced to one-third of its strength at the outbreak of hostilities—and the Czar still writing to the Czarina his remarkable epistles filled with startling, confidential disclosures of historic importance, with fervent declarations of unfailing love and devotion and with utterly trivial commonplaces.

LETTERS AND LILIES

After the capture of Przemysl, the Russian armies continued their offensive in Galicia and in Poland. Amid heavy fighting, the Russian forces pressed forward into the Carpathian Mountains after the retreating Austrians and Nicky prepared to set foot on soil conquered by Russia for the first time in his life. In his letter to the Czarina, dated April 5, 1915 (Russian old style, or thirteen days later by our calendar), Nicky wrote from the headquarters of the Supreme Commander-in-Chief:

"My Own Beloved Sunny:

"I thank you from the depth of my loving old heart for your two sweet letters, telegrams and lilies, that touched me so! I felt very sad and low leaving you not quite well yet, and was in that mood until I went to bed.

"Already on the way here Voyeskov brought me the news that it was better to turn off from Vilna, as the German aeroplanes were dropping bombs onto the line and trains passing Bielostock, and that General Alexiev was not at Siedletz. So, we arrived here at 9 this morning.

"I had a long talk with Nikolasha (Grand Duke Nicholas, the Czar's cousin, Commander-in-Chief of the armies), then the usual report and church. He proposed to me to go soon to Lemberg and Przemysl, as later some measure will have to be introduced in Galicia. The same Bobrinski told me a few days ago. Nikolasha will accompany me, as it will be my first visit to a conquered country."

"PEACEFUL REMEMBRANCES"

Evidently the Czarina did not like the idea of the Czar making his conquering entry into Galicia a joint affair with Grand Duke Nicholas and wrote Nicky that Nikolasha ought to be left behind, for in his letter to the Czarina the following day, the Czar wrote:

"My Own Beloved Sunny:

"Darling-mine, I am not of your opinion that Nikolasha ought to remain here when I go to Galicia. On the contrary, just because it is a conquered province where I go during the war, the Commander-in-Chief must accompany me. I think that all my people find this right. He accompanies me, not I in his suite.

"To day we motored along the beautiful road we know and went further on in a lovely wood. It was simply hot and we found some flowers—this is one of them!

"Tomorrow our engagement day, how many peaceful remembrances. God bless you, my Treasure, and the children, and thank Olga and Alexei (the Czarevitch) for their letters. I kiss you all tenderly and remain ever your own old huzy,

"NICKY."

The next day—the twenty-first anniversary of their engagement—the Czar wrote his wife in the deeply sentimental vein of the earlier years of their courtship and marriage:

THEIR ENGAGEMENT DAY

"My Own Precious Darling:

"Fondest loving thanks for your dear letter so full of sweet words and for two telegrams. Have not I also thought of you and the day 21 years ago? I wish you health and everything a deeply loving heart can wish, and thank you on my knees for all your love, affection, friendship and patience you have shown these long years of our married life!

"The weather today reminds me of that day at Coburg. It is sad not to be together! Nobody knew it was our engagement day—curious how people quickly forget—though it means nothing to them.

"Kirovsheim (Minister of Agriculture) arrived to explain to Nikolasha before me different ideas about measures that might be taken in order to reward officers and men, leaving the army after the end of the war, those who have distinguished themselves, who are mutilated and in general all the wounded! Very good ideas, which I shall explain to you at home. I forgot their families of course."

NICKY THE CONQUEROR

The next day the Czar crossed the old Russian border into Galicia, got his first view of the battlefields where the Russian and Austrian armies fought during the early days of the war, and then went on to Lemberg and Przemysl. In a letter to the Czarina, dated April 12 (April 25) he wrote this

Scientist Discusses The Origin Of Life

THE first living thing was an isolated cell in the primeval ocean, according to Dr. E. J. Allen a British biologist. Somehow or other it grew a tail that enabled it to rise to the surface, and then the sunlight gave it power to make its own food out of the air and water. That this guesswork is in accordance with our latest knowledge is asserted by the editor of The Scientific Monthly (Lancaster, Pennsylvania). We read in this magazine:

Was the first living being a plant or animal? How could either originate out of non-existing matter?

These are questions that have hitherto baffled scientists. They could trace back, more or less satisfactorily, the lines of development of plants and animals to the simplest and most primitive forms of life, but there they ran up against an insurmountable wall, on the near side of which was the world of living organisms, and on the far side the world of inert mineral and inorganic matter.

We all know that non-living matter can be converted over into living matter, for we do that ourselves whenever we eat or breathe. We all know that green plants have the power of building up sugar and starch and wood (the so-called carbohydrates) out of the water of the soil and carbon dioxid of the air, for we can see them do it any sunny day. But it is life only that can bring into the living organism this inorganic material. Water and carbon dioxid, plain "soda water," do not spontaneously change over into sugar or start to grow into a plant. It requires green colored granules of the leaves, called chlorophyl, to effect this transformation.

But chlorophyl is a very complicated chemical compound. It is formed only by green plants as they develop in the sun's rays from white sprouts. So the plant must exist before cholorophyl is formed. But, on the other hand, a plant could not exist unless it got its energy from the sugar and other stuff stored up previously by some chlorophyl-bearing plant. Even the simplest green plant can not live and grow on its nutritive salts in the sunshine unless it has a bit of plant-stuff to feed on as a starter.

We might surmise as a way out of the dilemma that animal life came first on the earth, and, in decaying, supplied the primitive plants with the necessary organic foodstuff. But here we are blocked because animals are parasites of plants. They live on the sugars and so forth that the green leaves have stored up by means of sunshine.

So this was the perplexing situation. Plants can feed on animals or other plants. Animals can feed on plants or other animals. But where could the first animals or plants get their food when there was nothing but mineral matter in the world? It was worse than the old question, which came first, the hen or the egg?

But of late we are beginning to get light on the problem. The wall between the living and non-living is crumbling. Certain sugars and proteins, such as the plant forms that we eat, can now be made in the laboratory out of inorganic material. Artificial cells have been constructed that grow and crawl and feed themselves and stick out feelers and subdivide very much like living cells. It has been found that ultra-violet rays, that is, light of such short waves that it can not be seen, can convert water and carbon dioxid into sugar as chlorophyl does.

These short waves are not contained in the sunshine that reaches the earth today, but it is found that ordinary rays may act the same way in the presence of certain substances such as iron rust in water. These same energetic rays are able to incorporate the

Japan Interested In Clean Harbors

Japan will doubtless send a delegation to the international conference of all maritime nations which will be held in the United States about the first of next year, to consider measures to prevent steamships from dumping oil refuse, ashes and other garbage on the water, according to former United States Representative Frank Appleby of New Jersey. Mr. Appleby left Yokohama recently for San Francisco on the President Taft after spending two months in Oriental cities on an unofficial tour of investigation regarding laws and conditions in the Far East.

A resolution offered before the last session of Congress, which was adopted by both Houses and signed by President Harding, authorises the United States to invite other maritime nations to invite delegates to devise means to prevent vessels from fouling the bay and oceanic waters, and was written by Mr. Appleby. Through his campaign the resolution was put through Congress.

MORE OIL BURNERS

Ocean-going vessels are burning more oil and less coal, and there is considerable oil refuse, which when poured out on the ocean kills fish, ruins bathing resorts and results in insanitary conditions. This problem of refuse disposal is growing more acute every day, according to the former legislator. Japan is affected more, and should be more concerned, regarding this problem than any other nation, as her people depend to an enormous degree on the fishing industry for livelihood.

In his trip through the Orient Mr. Appleby found that all ports had local laws restricting boats from dumping within the bounds of the bay or harbor, but he says that this is not sufficient, as tides and wind carry the refuse from deep water back into the harbors. This fact was brought out in a House of Representatives hearing during the last session. What Mr. Appleby wants is a law preventing all dumping on water. Oil refuse can be piped from the steamer tanks into reservoirs on land, where through a process of filtration the refuse can be extracted and the oil used over again. This plan has been worked out successfully on the Pacific Coast in America, where filtration tanks near Del Monte, California, take care of all refuse discharged from oil burners.

In the case of other garbage every vessel should be compelled to dump this refuse into vats carried in the hold, which can be emptied while the boat is docked. Much of this garbage can be used in building roads or burned as fuel.

PLAN MEETS APPROVAL

Mr. Appleby has received encouraging co-operation wherever he has gone, and officials in Japan, China and the Philippines have indicated that should the United States government extend an invitation to a conference on garbage disposal these countries would send delegates. The Department of State has a marine engineer in England at present consulting with public men regarding the problem, which is proving a menace to life and health in England as well as in other quarters. Approval has been voiced there of the proposed conference and delegates have been promised if the session is held, according to the former Congressman.

After a trip to Del Monte to inspect the oil refuse vats, Mr. Appleby will go to Washington to submit his unofficial report of findings here in the Orient. From this data resolutions will be drawn up to be presented at the international conference next year.

Mr. Appleby became an enthusiast for the Orient as a result of his long trip and he predicts great things for all of the various peoples among whom he went. I was surprised at the size of some of the cities here and the great progress which they have made according to Western standards, he stated in speaking of the various places which he and his party visited. "The most striking example of this, of course, is Shanghai which has been under foreign influence for years. There the sky line which greets one upon his arrival by steamer is similar to that of New York on a slightly reduced scale. The buildings along the Bund are the finest that money can provide and a pleasant surprise to one seeing them for the first time.

GIVES PRAISE TO MANILA

"Of the many places we visited, I think Manila is by far the prettiest city of them all and far exceeds many tropical places of other seas and which are far better known to the Western world than is this Philippine city. The municipal administration is doing wonders there and the National government is backing them strongly under the leadership of Governor-General Wood, a man whose heart and soul is wrapped up in the development of the islands and who is going to remain there until he completes the job. The future of the Philippines is almost an unlimited one and the present administration is doing wonders toward making it a reality."

During the visit of Mr. Appleby and his party to the various cities of the Orient they were much entertained in official circles by American and native authorities alike. During their stay in Peking several official functions were given in their honor in addition to the sightseeing trips which were arranged for them. They were much impressed with this ancient Chinese city but Mr. Appleby is of the opinion that it is suffering terribly from the present powerless government which nominally is in control there. He states that an unwise policy is being pursued in regard to tourists and that no effort is being made to have them come there and that as a result business houses there are losing heavily in trade.

Mr. Appleby is much interested in the future of the American steamers operating across the Pacific and thinks it an assured one but refused to comment on the recent reports that an offer of $1,000,000,000 has been made in America for the entire Shipping Board Fleet.

Sez Cale Pottle---"Ain't Politics Wonderful?" -:- By Ford C. Frick

"Somehow I can't get th' kick out of politics now that I used to in th' old days," grumbled Cale Pottle, as he eased his cumbersome bulk into his own special chair in the rear of Will Perkins's grocery.

"Down in our town we used to take our politics like we did our religion. If a guy was a Baptist he jest naturally couldn't see no good at all in a Methodist, and if a fellow was a Democrat he knew and declared that all Republicans was thieves, liars and rascals. Why a few years ago we could go through this town the day before election and tell to a man just how many votes each candidate would get and where they would come from.

"I remember well enough back in th' Spring of '96 when Lem Perkins was runnin' for Justice of th' Peace, and I bet Cy Wilkins a dollar I could not only name the' guy thet would be elected, but also give him th' exact count. And I picked Lem and said th' score would be twenty-nine to sixteen, but Cale McMeans, which has always voted Democratic, double crossed me by gettin' sick on election day, and I lost th' bet by one vote.

"Anyhow, though, that shows what politics used to be. They wasn't none of this wishy-washy stuff in them days; no beatin' around th' bush and eleventh-hour spell-bindin' to win over the independent votes. Not at all. All we did was take our ballot down to th' bank and ask old man Barkley how we should ought to mark it, and, gettin' our instructions, go to the ballot box and do like he said.

"And in them days, too, a fellow's vote was always good for a dollar or two, and I have known 'em to market at as high as five bucks when th' results was particularly close.

"But not today, nossir. What with this League of Nations business, and th' World Court that President Harding is ballyhooin' as a sort of a nostrum for all ills and th' income tax and prohibition, party lines is about as inconspicious as prohibition agents at an Irish picnic. Even th' grand old question of tariff fails to rile 'em any more with each one havin' the same ideas and belief except maybe a little more so.

"It used to be that editors would cut loose with grand and flowing language in praise of th' party of their faith, and be th' same token they would flay th' skin off th' rival candidates' back; and folks would clap their hands, and wave th' flag and yell out, 'Ain't politics wonderful.'

"But nowadays each editor tries to get hep to all th' international laws and relations and make his editorials th' kind that will hold water two ways from Sunday, and then, when th' election's over all he has to do is extract certain paragraphs for reprint in big, black type with stars and asterisks in th' proper place, and say 'I told you so,' an' follow it up with a little advertisement sayin', 'The Bugle was one of th' papers that supported th' winnin' candidates.'

"And th' women! They's absolutely no use tryin' to teach a woman th' little intimacies of politics. You kin preach to your wife till you're blue in the face about th' glory of th' party and all that, and think all th' time that you're making a wonderful impression, and then have her go out on election day and vote for th' rival candidate just because some other female told her that he was kind to his family and always helped his wife dry th' dishes after supper.

"What kin you expect, though, with a lot of foreigners coming in and tryin' to run our affairs from th' platform of some readin' circle or lecture bureau? Every time it looks as though we might be in a fair way to develop a little issue of our own and liven up elections a bit by a real party battle, along comes some long-haired Bolsheviki from Russia, or some suave, polished gent from England, sayin', 'Oh, naughty, naughty. Don't do it. Let us show you how!'

"And darn me if good American citizens don't fall for that stuff, and sit up on their haunches and lap it up with gusto, without ever once stoppin' to consider that maybe th' guys that live here know a little more about th' country than th' European tourist.

"I guess, though, they's nothing to do about it now. But sometime some guy from the U. S. is gonna go to Europe and try to influence th' voters over there. And when he cures his black eye and get out of th' hospital and back home again, he's gonna wake up to th' fact that this foreign advice and assistance is a one-way proposition, anyhow. And then maybe we'll start doing things th' way we want 'em done and not th' way Europe would like to see 'em.

"And then, when that comes, you're gonna see old Cale out there wavin' th' flag like in th' old days, and saying to th' world, Gosh, ain't politics wonderful!'" nitrogen of mineral salts into compounds like the protein of the living cell. So here we see the possibility that the action of the sunlight on the sea in primordial periods—or even in the present—might produce sufficient food to give a single cell a start in life and enable it to grow and multiply and develop into other and higher forms.

But how this primal cell got to going in this way the biologists are only beginning to surmise. Dr. E. J. Allen, at the recent Hull meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science ventures the theory that the first organism was of the animal sort and spherical shape, but that it gradually grew a tail or whip that enabled it to rise to the sunny surface of the sea whenever it sank below, and that it there acquired the chlorophyl by which it could make its own food out of the air and water. This is far from knowing what did happen in those early days, but it is a great advance to be able even to speculate as to how it might have happened, since not many years ago it seemed that it could not happen at all.

Czar Tells How Nicholas In Tears Offered To Resign

picturesque account of what he saw and felt:

"My Own Precious Darling:

"April 9 I arrived at Brody, across the old frontier. Nikolasha was already there with his staff. After the report I finished my last letter and papers, lunched and started by motor with Nikolasha. It was hot and windy, our own dust covering us like a white sheet. You cannot imagine what we looked like.

"Stopped and got out twice to look at the positions of our troops and those of the Austrians—during the first great battles in August last year. Lots of crosses on the fraternal graves and on solitary graves. Astounding what long marches an army did then fighting every day!

HOARSE BUT HAPPY

"April 10. I left Lemberg by rail in Austrian carriages and arrived at Sambor at 1; was met by General Brusilov and to my enormous surprise by the guard of honor of the dear Sixteenth Rifles of Odessa. The company was commanded by my friend the feldfebel (?), as all the officers were wounded and the captain killed. When they marched past the band played the march we all liked so in Livadia, and I could not keep my tears back. I drove to Brusilov's house. He presented his whole staff and then we lunched. After that back to the train and at 4 arrived at Chyron, so prettily situated among the hills.

"There on a large field was drawn up the mass of troops of the Third Caucasian Corps. As there was little time left I passed the troops in a motor to thank them for their fine service. We were awfully tossed about, Nikolasha and I. I go back to the train completely hoarse, but so pleased and happy to have seen them.

"An hour later we arrived at Przemysl, a small town with narrow streets and gray, dull houses, full of troops and of Orenburg Cossacks. Nikolasha and I and some of the gentlemen lived in a small house rather clean, whose owner fled before the fall. The place is surrounded by hills and looks very pretty. We dined in the garrison club, where everything remained untouched.

"Slept badly.

"April 11. Got up early and drove out with all the lot of us to look at the fortifications. Very interesting colossal works and awfully well fortified; not an inch of earth left untouched. Such pretty views from the forts all covered with grass and fresh flowers. I send you one I dug out with Grabbe's dagger."

THE WAR TIDE TURNS

But even as Nicky, "so pleased and happy," toured the newly occupied territory, the Germans were rapidly preparing a counter-offensive of huge proportions. General Mackensen took command of heavily reinforced Austro-German armies in Galicia; General von Lauenstein, at the head of a great force of Germans, commenced the invasion of Courland and Lithuania in the north and in Poland other German armies still threatened Warsaw.

On May 1 a furious massed Austro-German offensive was launched in Galicia and then followed weeks crowded with disaster for the Russian armies. The Dunajec line was pierced by the Germans early in May and, overwhelming all resistance, the Austro-German armies along a front 60 miles wide in Galacia swept on toward Przemysl and Jaroslav. The Prussian Guard re-took Jaroslav on May 12 and by May 20, after inflicting heavy losses upon the retreating Russian armies, the Austro-Germans commenced a bombardment of Przomysl.

What happened back of the Russian lines is startlingly revealed in this remarkable letter the Czar wrote the Czarina from the Supreme Headquarters on May 24:

"My Own Sweet Love:

"When I arrived the prevailing feeling here was a depressed and low one. In a half hour's talk Nikolasha explained the whole situation very clearly.

DEFEATIST GENERALS

"Ivanov's (General) chief of staff, poor General Dragonisrov, went off his head and began telling right and left that it was necessary to retreat back to Kiev. Such talks coming from the top, of course, acted strongly on the minds of the commanding generals and, coupled with the tremendous German attacks and our enormous losses, brought them to the conclusion that nothing remained for them but to retreat.

"Since January Nikolasha gave strict orders to all of them to fortify strong positions in the rear. This was not done. Therefore, General Radko-Dmitriev had to leave his army, General Lesh being named as his successor. Dragonisrov was replaced by General Savitch, an excellent man, who came with his Siberian corps from Vladivostok.

"But now, since Savitch's nomination, thank God, thanks also to his (Savitch's) strong and calm will and clear head, the generals' moods had changed. Nikolasha sent General Danilov (one of his chief aides), who came back yesterday, perfecty calmed with what he has seen and heard.

NIKOLASHA IN TEARS

"The moral state of the troops is splendid, as usual! but the only disquieting thing remains as in the past—the lack of ammunition!

"Now you can judge whether I was to leave this place under such hard circumstances. It would have seemed that I wished to avoid remaining near the army during serious moments. Poor Nikolasha cried in my cabin when he had explained all this, and even asked me whether I was not thinking of replacing him by any other more capable man. He thanked me over and over for remaining here longer, because my presence calmed him personally.

"There, I had to explain all this to you, my Treasure. Now my conscience feels clear."

PRZEMYSL RECAPTURED

More weeks of Russian reverses and heavy losses. Przemysl was recaptured June 3 by the Austro-Germans, who swept on, overcoming the desperate Russian opposition, and reoccupied Lemberg on June 4. A few days later the fall of General Sukhomlinoff, the Russian Minister of War, was announced. In a letter from the Supreme Headquarters, June 12 (June 25), the Czar revealed this inside picture of the crisis to the Czarina:

"My Own Beloved Wifey:

"Thank you ever so much for your two dear letters. They refreshed me. This time I left with a very heavy heart. Thought over those difficult and different questions—changing Ministers, about the Duma, the Second Line of Reserves, etc. On my arrival I found Nikolasha serious, but quite calm. We at once began speaking of the latter question. He told me he understood the gravity, and that he had a letter from Groemykin (the Czar's Prime Minister) on the subject. Everything in one's power shall be done to put it off. I asked him who he could recommend in place of Sukhomlinov (the deposed War Minister). He answered Polivanov (General Polivanov, a former Assistant Minister of War).

SUKHOMLIOFF'S SUCCESSOR

"After having looked through many names of generals, I came to the conclusion that for the moment he might be the right man. So he was sent for and arrived this afternoon. I spoke to him quite frankly, and told him why I was displeased with him before (A. Gutchkov, etc.). He said he knew it and bore the burden of my displeasure for three years. He lost his only son in this war, and has helped Alek very much and in a good way. So I hope his nomination will be a successful one.

"Today I saw Krivoshein, too, and had a long talk. He was less excited and, therefore, more reasonable. I have sent for Goremykin and a few of the older Ministers, and tomorrow we shall discuss some of those questions and leave nothing unsaid.

"Yes, my sweet one, I begin to feel my old heart. The first time it was in August last, after Samsonov's disaster (the Russian defeat at Tannenberg), and now again, so heavy on the left side when I breathe. Well, what is to be done?

"Alas, I must end now, they are all collecting for dinner near the big tent. God bless you, my treasure, my comfort and my happiness. I kiss you and all the family. Divine weather. Ever your own huzy,

"NICKY."

A GRAVE CRISIS

Czar Nicholas and the Russian cause were facing a grave crisis. Already the Austro-Germans had smashed the Russian armies into a continuous retreat in Galicia; a German offensive was thrusting into Courland and Lithuania; and now the Kaiser—"Willy" of Nicky's pre-war epistles—had ordered von Hindenburg and Ludendorff to launch a mighty drive on Warsaw. The Czar convened a Council of Ministers at the Supreme Headquarters to decide what was to be done. In his letter, dated June 16 (June 29), he discloses what occurred at this historic meeting, and also reveals the amazing fact that General Danilov, one of Grand Duke Nicholas's chief aides, was accused of being a spy. The Czar wrote:

"My Own Beloved Sunny:

"Tender thanks for your dear, long letter, in which you give me account of your conversation with Paul. Your answers were perfectly correct about the question of peace. This is precisely the main point of my rescript to old Goremykin, which is going to appear.

"What concerns Danilov—I think the idea of his being a spy not worth a straw. I also know he is disliked, even hated, in the army, beginning from General Ivanov down to the last officer. He has got an awful character, and is very cutting with his juniors.

"Nikolasha knows this, and from time to time puts him into his place; but he finds it impossible to replace him after eleven months' hard work—so well the man knows his duty.

"Even Krivoshein spoke to me upon this subject—he finds, for instance, Nikolasha ought to make changes in his staff and choose other men in Yanushkevitch's and Danilov's place. I advised him to tell it to Nikolasha, which he did—of course, from his own personal point of view. Later he told me that Nikolasha has evidently been displeased by his frankness."

Three days later, in the midst of these momentous events, Nicky paused to write the Czarina:

"My Own Darling Sunny:

"I beg your pardon for sending you the empty bottle of cascar, but I am in need of some more. I put inside the end of my candle—give it to Alexei (the Czarevitch) for his collection.

"Now the guards and other troops are being brought over toward Cholm and Lublin, because it is in that direction that the Germans are pressing. This is the reason why I remain here until the concentration is over.

"I am feeling all right again—I simply had a .....in the left side of my back which hurt me whenever I wanted to take a full breath; it hurts especially by night, but now it is quite gone.

"On account of the heat we take long motor drives and walk very little.

"We choose new roads and go round the neighborhood after the map. Often there happen mistakes, as the maps are old, made eighteen years ago; there are new roads new villages and some woods gone, which changes the map.

"It is good you saw Stcherbatov; try and see now General Polivanov (the new Minister of War) and be frank with him."

DOMINOS AND DISASTERS

The great Austro-German offensive was now in motion all the way from the Baltic to Bukowina and the Russian lines were being dealt staggering blows on several fronts. In another remarkable letter dated June 23 (July 6) the Czar wrote:

"My Sweet Wifey—Dear:

"So many thanks for your dear letters. Yesterday I really enjoyed myself for some hours in Bielovezh. It was too strange to be there alone without you and the children. I felt lost and sad, but yet pleased to see the house and our nice rooms and to forget the present and live through the days that have passed. But the night before starting I spent in anguish. The moment I finished playing dominos, Nikolasha appeared and showed a telegram he had just got from General Alexiev, in which it was said that the Germans had torn through our lines and were marching deep in our rear.

"Nikolasha left in his train at once and promised to wire in the morning from Siedletz. Of course, I could not leave for Bielostok as had intended at 10:00. All my people felt very low, except Voyeikov, because they did not know what was the reason of Nikolasha's sudden departure.

"At last at 11:40 a good telegram came from him, saying that the gap was stopped by a vigorous counter attack by three of our regiments, and that the enemy had been repulsed with heavy losses."

THE DEPLETED ARMIES

The next day the Czar wrote from the Supreme Army headquarters:

"We arrived here at 10:45, the very moment that Nikolasha's train was slowly steaming into its place. After a talk with him I had supper with my people and immediately went to bed. He told me that, on the whole, the situation had not become worse yesterday, and it would improve if the Germans did not press us at that same place for a few days. In this case we would have time to collect enough troops (fresh ones) to try and stop them. But again that cursed question of lack of artillery, ammunition and of rifles puts a stop to an energetic movement forward, because after three days' serious fighting it may become exhausted (ammunition). Having no new rifles, it is impossible to fill up the losses of men, and the army now is a little bit stronger than in time of peace. It ought to be, and was in the beginning, three times stronger. Such is the situation we are in for the moment.

"If there were no battles for a month our case would be much better. Of course, this is only for you to know, please do not speak about it, my darling."

"Save your eyes."

Sikhs And Sahibs—The Tranquility Of The Punjab

BY AN INDIAN

Newspapers have exaggerated to a very large degree the effect of the Non-Cooperation Movement upon the villagers of India. As a matter of fact, very few have been touched by the political unrest and hardly any are taking place in the administrative circles of the country.

To the villager in India his land and his agricultural conditions are the foremost concern. Who rules the country is not in his sphere of knowledge. He has never been consulted when kings have come and kings have gone. All he wants is peace and prosperity. He has had these always, with the safety of his life and property from wandering thieves and bands of robbers. He has had justice and bands of robbers. He has justice done to him in courts of law with the British magistrate as his judge, and he is not anxious consciously to change his present position for he knows not what in the future.

For the ordinary politician he has no use. He wants water for his land and plenty of crops during the year; if the rain fails him his lot is hard; if he has these showers of blessing in abundance he is happy. The schemes of irrigation which have occupied a great deal of the attention of the Government have been a great boon to the villagers. If these can be multiplied and the villagers kept busy on their lands, with plenty of water available, they will not cause any inconvience to the Government politically.

The villages in which there has been a great deal of unrest in the Punjab are those where the Sikhs are in the majority.

RELIGIOUS DISPUTE

This trouble is the cause of their religious disputes over their sacred shrines and temples. As a community they wished to control these, and would not brook any Government interference. In principle they were right, but the means adopted to attain this end were not always constitutional. It can be quite well imagined how political adventurers would and did make capital out of this state of mind. The Sikh movement known as the "Akali," took a peculiar turn, and became semi-religious and semi-political, and among the rank and file of the Sikhs took an anti-British turn. A visit to the famous Golden Temple at Amritsar brought this out very well. I went with a European lady tourist to visit the center of the Sikh Faith. At the foot of the clock tower I started a conversation with a Sikh who was wearing the black turban and had a "Kirpan," i.e., a sort of dagger hanging on one side (this is the uniform adopted by the "Akalis").

He told me how wicked the Government was, but could not tell me exactly in what way he thought it was wicked, and when I said that the Punjab Legislative Council were going to settle the question of the shrines, he said, "We don't want any settlement, we want to make it hot for the Government." It seemed as if many of these men were out just to cause trouble. When we came close to the flight of steps leading to the Sacred Tank, we took off our shoes, and were about to enter when a crowd of urchins and grown-up men shouted, "Here, take off your socks as well and wash your feet."

THE SIKH TEMPER

This was new to me, as I had in the days gone by often entered with my socks on. However, we had to conform to the regulations. The lady with me asked where she could wash her feet. "There," said several of the crowd, pointing to a basin of dirty water which was filthy with the dust of thousands who had dipped their feet in it. She protested, and preferred not to see the Temple than wash her feet in that water. They pointed to a little tap, and gave her the concession to wash under it. She took a handful of water and poured it on her feet, and was going to take some more when they stopped her and gave her permission to enter the Temple Area. "But she has not washed her feet," I said smiling. "Well, that does not really matter, we just wanted to make you both obey our orders." It seemed so vindictive and so childish, but that is the mood in which one finds the "Akali" Sikhs at present.

Apart from this Sikh discontent the Punjab villager is too busy with his own economic questions to worry about politics. I have travelled especially in third-class carriages to get at the thoughts of the peasant. Invariably their conversation is of prices and what it costs them to buy their wheat and flour. I took special notice of their remarks regarding clothes, and asked them why they did not wear "Khaddar." "We have no time to make it, and the weavers would rather give it to the man who can afford to pay them their price on the spot." So they have to buy factory-made cloth for its cheapness.

THE GANDHI MOVEMENT

Their life is unchanged as ever, their interests are exactly what they have been in their land and their cattle. I was astonished to find out that they had not heard of the Non-Cooperatio Movement, though they knew that a man called Gandhi, who lived" somewhere in the South,' was causing some trouble to the "Sircar." I asked them if they would change the British officials for Indians: "No, certainly not; the people who smite us and get bribes from us are our own countrymen, the subordinate police and Civil Servants, but not the Sahibs who go around the district." 'I have no doubt that Indians in the higher civil and police services would be as mindful of the welfare of the peasant as the Britisher is, but so far the peasant has always associated these higher posts with the Britisher, hence his perference for him over the Indian.

(Possible Rules For Trans-Atlantic Liners)

1. No ship of foreign registry carrying cigars or cigarettes shall touch at any port in the United States of Amerisahara. Same must be smoked by the crew, checked with the seagulls, or thrown to the fish upon arrival within the three-mile limit. This will be a great waste until such time as the seagulls and fish learn to smoke, but the government can't help it.

2. No ship of American registry shall sail or dock carrying either of the above commodities. The attorney general has ruled that cigarettes stunt the growth of the navy and merchant marine.

3. Chewing gum, chocolate bars, lollypops, all day suckers, candied apples, and other sweets will not be allowed to sail on any vessel touching at an American port. Ships of U. S. registry shall not sail or dock with confectionery of any kind, but may take on a cargo of same from glucose runners outside territorial waters.

CUT PLUG TABOO

4. Skippers are notified that the anti-chewing tobacco amendment has passed and that the possession of cut plug by any vessel within three miles of the American coast leaves it liable to seizure.

5. Pipes, cigarette and cigar holders, pouches and cigar-store coupons are barred within the three-mile limit. An amendment prohibiting the crews and passengers of all English, Dutch, Scandinavian, Spanish, Portuguese, Chinese and Greek ships carrying matches is now in the works.

6. No literature of any kind shall be imported. It shall be the duty of all skippers to collect all books in the possession of passengers upon reaching territorial water and send same ashore to the coast guards in the breeches buoys. The coast guards will read the books and forward them to the owners if they think it wise.

7. All French farces must be dropped overboard outside the three-mile limit. Plays by authors native to other countries shall be turned over to the keeper of the first lighthouse passed. The lighthouse keeper will row ashore with such plays if he thinks them fit for the public.

8. All steamship lines are hereby warned that one-piece bathing suits, transparent hose, colored sandals and lace underwear are against the 465th amendment to the constitution, and that no ship carrying same shall touch American shores.

"FOR PALE PEOPLE"

9. It is the decision of the attorney general, upheld by the Supreme Court (Justices Alice Jones and Hazel Smith dissenting), that no ocean-going vessel shall be permitted to dock at an American port or leave same while carrying rouge, powder, hair-bleach, superfluous hair remover, double chin remover or lipsticks. America is against cosmetics. If necessary, she will go to war to make the world safe for pale people.

10. Skippers are cautioned again by the secretary of state that the amendment prohibiting ukuleles, banjos, fiddles, saxophones, bass drums, cornets, jew's-harps, harmonicas, etc., has been passed by congress, and that vessels will carry same at their own peril.

11. All playing cards, dice and pool tables shall be sealed within the three-mile mark.

12. Music on any passenger liner while inside United States territorial water is strictly prohibited. Pianos must be thrown overboard before passing Ambrose channel lightship.

13. It seems necessary again to warn steamship men that it is unconstitutional to blow a whistle inside territorial waters. Whistling was declared unconstitutional three months ago and upheld by the courts.

(Write the government for further dope.)

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

June 9, 1923

Spot and forward bar silver were each down 1-16d. in London yesterday. The New York price declined to 64¾ cents and the London-New York cross rate to 461½. The only change in our official quotations here today was a rise in the Franc rate to 1115.

Our market here while at times showing signs of easiness was on the whole steady throughout the day, particularly for near delivery. Business in Sterling was done at 3-1-9-16 for cash, 3-1⅛ for June delivery, 3-1⅝ for July and 3-1¼ for August.

Gold Dollars were done at 72½ for near and 72⅛ for forward delivery, and Yen at 68 for near and 68⅛ for forward. At times there were buyers and at times sellers at these rates but at the close there were probably more sellers than buyers.

Banks were quoting 3-2 73¾ and 1140 for Sterling, Gold Dollar and Franc Bills respectively.

India sold a small amount of silver in London yesterday and the market there is reported as closing steady. New York reports the market as uncertain but state that supplies available for near delivery are small.

Share Market

In their weekly report on the share market, Messrs. J. P. Bisset and Company state:

Business in the local share market has not been so brisk during the past week except for "Rubbers" which have changed hands in all direction on speculative lines at slightly higher prices on the strength of recent reports from the Straits relative to a reduction in stocks and consequent estimated drop in quantity available for export month by month in the near future. Langkats (Combined) have been a quiet market and have eased off to Buyers at Tls. 29 Cash, Tls. 29½ June and Tls. 31-31¼ September. All other local stocks have been dull with buyers at unattractive prices only.

London market quotations continue practically unchanged and the following are the latest prices offered to us by cable since last week:

Exchange Shifts In Constantinople

Constantinople, — Constantinople long has been one of the most cosmopolitan cities and at the present time it is especially a Babel of Moneys. Nowhere else, probably, are so many different kinds of the world's money in circulation. But, says a writer in the "Corriere della Sera," when you go from one banking office to another you find incredible differences. If you protest the banker, who is a Hebrew, a Greek or an Armenian, naively replies: "The rate of exchange has this minute risen!"

The strangest adventures in the domain of money changing are, however, met in the trains of the Orient Express, from Paris to Constantinople. You depart, provided with the money of your country, and the cautious also take with them Turkish money, but this is not sufficient. For the Orient Express passes, without change of cars, through the lands of six nations, and on each frontier the money reckoning changes, as it is stipulated that all settling of accounts of the day shall be made in the different denominations of the different countries.

Thus you have to consult bulletins, exchange lists, perform algebraic calculations for a cup of coffee, to torment yourself with the extraction of cubic roots for a dinner, endanger digestion through an avalanche of equations—Swiss and French francs, Italian lire, Serbian dinare, Bulgarian levas, intermixed with Greek drachmas in Adrianople and Turkish pounds from Thrace to the Bosporus.

Russians In Paris Angered By Mockery Of Czar's Court

Paris, by mail.—Real friends and sympathisers with Russia and her unfortunate exiles in France are finding it hard to forgive a mock ceremonial of the late Czar's court which took place recently during one of the gaudy, hilarious fetes for which the Cannes Casino is famous.

Dancing was in full swing, the noise was at its height when, amid the clinking of glasses and the popping of champagne corks, a little group detached itself from the merrymakers.

In the center of the group were the impersonators of the Grand Dukes Cyril and Michael. Preceded by liveried lackeys and escorted by a phalanx of Grand Duchesses and men and women known in Russian society, they moved in solemn pomp between lines of grinning onlookers, to a platform on which a purple throne had been placed. The two Grand Dukes were installed thereon with much bowing and bending of the knees. Then with all the reverences that go with the ceremonial of the late Czar's court, the other spectators, some of whom had done more than "look on the wine when it was red," were permitted to kneel and kiss their Royal Highnesses' hands.

The scene lasted half an hour, while the hundreds of improvised courtiers passed before the Grand Dukes and did more or less mock homage. They had bought the privilege with the payment of an admission fee of $7.

There is much indignation in the Russian colony here as well as among its friends. It is suggested that such a masquerade at a time when authentic Russian artistocrats and bourgeois can only save themselves from starvation by working as restaurant bell boys and attendants is singularly inappropriate; and unjustified even by a Riviera carnival season. Those who took part in it are blamed for lending themselves in an exhibition shattering the dignity of the fallen house of Romanoff.

The fact that the fete was attended by a Government official delegate apparently sent by the Prefect of the Department, is also the subject of adverse comment.

Authority On Indian Lore To Give Lecture Tuesday

Passing through Shanghai on her way back to America, after a tour through Europe and Asia Minor, is Mrs. Helen Fitzgerald, lecturer and authoress, and an authority on Indian lore. She has an entrancing tale to tell of her life among the North American Indians, for in this she has been especially fortunate. First introduced to the Selish tribe by Madame Jaques de Mers, who had lived on the Flathead Reservation since her girlhood and was greatly beloved by the Indians, she met the celebrated old chiefs and wise men of the tribe, and, during her many visits, around the camp-fire and on the trail, gleaned the material for her books, "Trails through Western Woods," "The White Quiver," "The Dream Maker." and others, quoted as authorities by the U. S. Government.

MRS. HELEN FITZGERALD

"Trails through Western Woods," which was very successful, did much to arouse sympathetic interest in the Indians. It was the means of attracting the attention of Helen Piotopowaka Clarke, a distinguished woman, half American and half Blackfoot. Miss Clarke invited Mrs. Fitzgerald to her beautiful home under the shadow of the Main Range of the Rocky Mountains, to meet the Head Chief and other distinguished personages of her tribe, and to witness the celebration of the Sun Dance ceremonial. The lodge of the Head Chief was opened to her and when the Great Chief learned that her mission was to interpret his people, their beliefs and customs, to the white race, he told her some of the most ancient and sacred myths and described the inner meaning of the building of the Sun Lodge.

ADOPTED BY TRIBE

For eight successive summers she has dwelt with the Blackfoot people. There, in the shadow of "Going-to-the-Sun," the sacred Peak of the "Tipi," she was adopted by the Piegan Indians, a branch of the confederated nation known collectively as the Blackfeet, during one of their pageants of the Sun Dance, held annually at Browning, Montana, within full view of the Rocky Mountains. She was painted red and dressed in the native costume, a flame-colored gown elaborately embroidered with beads, and, with moccasins on her feet, walked to the Sacred Temple of the Sun. It was then she realised the meaning of the word tenderfoot. From the Temple the Chief Priest came out, dancing and chanting strange chants of the Sun. Before the assembled tribe, the Head Chief became her sponsor, with Helen Piotopowaka Clarke, and gave her the name of "Muchanicha," which means, "The Victory." With her formal adoption into the tribe went the right to enter any tepee of the tribe.

LECTURES TUESDAY

Before proceeding on her way to America Mrs. Fitzgerald has consented to give a lecture on some of her experiences and the lore she has collected from the American Indian people. This will be held in the Royal Asiatic Hall, 5 Museum Road, on Tuesday, June 12, at 9:15 p.m. A distinctive feature of the lecture will be that the lecturer will be attired in the native costume of her adopted people, and will illustrate her talk with many colored lantern slides taken on the Blackfoot Reservation in Glacier National Park, as well as some pictures of the interior of the Sun Lodge and of the Sun Dance, not allowed to be taker by any other white person. The lecture promises to be an intellectual treat seldom offered to the Shanghai public.

AMERICAN COTTON REPORT BEARISH, MESSAGE STATES

New York cable advices report that the United States Department of Agriculture's first cotton crop forecast for the year, as published June 1, was markedly bearish, its estimate having been 71 percent. How favorable to the bears on the New York Cotton Exchange the figure can be seen from the following comparison with the first forecasts in the past years:

	percent
1923	71.0
1922	69.6
1921	66.0
1920	62.4
1919	75.6
1918	82.3

The National Ginners' Association's first forecast of the year is even better, being up to 72.0 percent.

Community Church, Now Campaigning For Funds, Gets Fine Testimonial

There is some satisfaction in giving what is wanted. Here is what a group of Russians think about the Community Soup Kitchen which for fourteen weeks has been quietly handing out the bowls of soup and the half-loaves of bread with the cups of sugared tea. The rooms donated by the Christian and Missionary Alliance are at 106 North Szechuen Road.

"McCracken, Esq.

"Sir.

"The horrors of Bolshevism forced us to leave our country; in arriving here as outcasts we hoped to find some work which could give us means of existence; very soon, helas, we saw that without any assistance no job could be obtained, no help could be received!

"GOD SENT HELP"

"Our position and especially that of our children and wives became the most awful. And just then God sent us a help; at 106 North Szechuen Road a soup kitchen has been established where we and our families could receive a free dinner or at a minimum cost. But we became much happier when we saw the kindness and the cordiality with which we were met when coming to have our meal. Nobody looked at us as at beggars, these people saw in us men who wished to work, even for a loaf of bread, and they do all that is possible to let us earn our living honorably. Many of us have received employment or temporary work; many others a roof and clothing. We do not know what organisation keeps this kitchen; we only know that it is kept by a U.S.A. community, and that you seem to be at the head of the organisation. That is why we address our thanks to you, Sir, and we beg you kindly to remit them to the U.S.A. organisation, ladies and gentlemen responsible for such a useful, clever and hearty work.

"SHALL NEVER FORGET"

"Assuring you that we shall never forget what the U.S.A. citizens of Shanghai have done for us, we remain, Sir,

"Yours very gratefully." (Signed by fourteen Russians, one signature for every thirty customers of the Community Kitchen).

Ever since the kitchen opened the Women's Auxiliary of the Community Church has been responsible. Every day in the week, in good weather or bad, two or more women have been there to assist, to buy supplies, and most of all to be friends, to talk by means of a smile that is understood in any language.

This is only one bit of service. Community Church is now before the public for money, for land and a church building. It asks that each American become a shareholder in this and help serve the community.

Offer For Ships Proves Delusion

Washington, June 6.—A. D. Lasker, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, has announced that an investigation has shown that Mr. John W. Slack's offer of more than $1,000,000,000 for the Shipping Board fleet, is a summer dream, and that there is no prospect that the offer would ever be executed even if it were accepted.

France Alarmed By German Invention

Paris, June 6.—French aviation investigators in Germany report that the Germans have discovered a radio process which forces airships, however powerful, to land.

The first successful operation of the new radio miracle was performed last month at Potsdams trasse, Berlin, by Siemens Manufacturing Company experts.

Serious alarm is felt in French airplane circles at this news, which vitiates every effort in the development of France's chief weapon, which is aviation. The manner in which it is used in stopping airplane motors is by waves of extraordinary potency and of special quality.

ICHANG THREATENED

Hankow, June 8.—Rumors are rife that the Northern troops at Ichang will soon mutiny. It is reported that General Wang Yu-chien, Commander-in-chief of the Ichang Division, has proclaimed martial law in that region. All throughfares at Ichang are closed to communication after eight o'clock in the evening.

One Japanese gunboat sailed up Ichang today. Tuchun Hsiao Yao-nan will also dispatch two cruisers to Icheng in readiness for emergencies.

Better Prospects Of Immigration Into Canada Says C.P. Man

Montreal, Quebec.—E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, at the annual meeting of the shareholders of the company, recently held here, in the course of his address, stated:

"Prospects for the immigration into Canada of the class of colonist urgently needed to assist in developing the country's natural resources are much brighter than they have been in the past two or three years, and heavier traffic from Great Britain and Northern Europe is indicated by the largely increased Western movement on the Company's ships during the first four months of this year. The agreement lately completed between the Imperial and Dominion Governments for joint action under the Empire Settlement Act, justifies the expectation of still greater numbers of colonists from Great Britain.

"The Canadian Government has recently, through the removal of restrictions which prevented the entry into Canada of citizens of certain countries, opened the door to the admission of immigrants of the highest type, men not only trained to agriculture, but artisans thoroughly skilled in their crafts, with a reputation for hard work and thrift which will place almost beyond question their success in Canada. I feel strongly that citizens of these countries may be assimilated into Canadian life with great advantage in this country.

"The countries of northern Europe, particularly Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, which were neutral during the war and which, therefore, suffered no loss of man power owing to war activity and from which emigration during the war ceased, find themselves overpopulated, and Switzerland and Holland have already found it necessary to follow the lead of Great Britain in voting public money to aid in the emigration of their nations."

A burlesque travesty on the Wild and Movie West.
When Nell wanted "glad rags" she went right out and took 'em with the persuasion of a threatening muzzle. And yet when she was "all dolled up" the city chap remained "unimpressed." But Nell battles on. When all the perils are overcome—well it's one real fine picture and to tell you about it would spoil it. See it!

French Forts On Sale As Villas By The Sea

Paris.—Any one who wants to buy or rent a nice Vaubun fortress along the French Riviera can apply to engineers' headquarters, French army, a new French real estate firm. The army owns the choicest sites along the Mediterranean coast ,from which the most beautiful views of the rocky, tropical, indented shore line and azure sky and water can be enjoyed. Gorgeous sunsets are guaranteed.

The buildings themselves are safely built with ten to twenty feet thick masonry walls and will last several lifetimes. They are made to insure nervous tenants against shells and bombs, and even meteors. Their chief charm is a cooling dampness, greatly appreciated in summer. Cistern water with every fort—if it rains. Land and four walls go with the sale, and occupants are allowed to put in doors, windows, modern conveniences and furniture—at their own expense.

Such is the attractive offer made to the public, because the French army now realises that these marine forts never again can be used for military purposes.

All of these forts were manned and equipped to protect the French coasts, but every man and every cannon was sent to the western front during the war. For nine years they have been lying idle and failing to pieces.

Progress in armaments, the evolution of war, the greater potency and caliber of cannons have made it evident that they are obsolete. All along the Mediterranean, almost every cape, every hill and every island, is crowned with a gray squat mass of stone and concrete. Not only are the trenches and moats now filled with plants of every description, but the profusion of nature has even been extended to the walls of the buildings, inside and out. It would have cost enormous sums to give these fortresses a modern efficiency, and the cost of their destruction would be great. So the army decided to rent or sell them.

It has now become the passing fashion to own a fort and command a superb view of land and sea, and the demand for them is great.

Most of the bidders are young women with artistic souls, who are hunting for the unusual and a quiet retreat to be turned into a shrine to Cupid.

Others buy a fort for the site, and soon the family wash will be seen where the flag of Frence once flew.

The Greatest Romance

The great adventure, the greatest danger, and the greatest love, all burst forth from one letter—a frivolous letter sent in jest. The story of the escape of a factory worker in the big city to a life of love and happiness—and of her single-handed struggle to retain that happiness. Some picture, truly an inspiration.

WHAT DO YOU MAKE OF THIS?

Editor, The China Press.

Sir: A few days ago, after some persuasion on the part of friends I engaged the services of a young Russian refugee at $200 a month, for certain work which would call for $25 from a competent Chinese. But this Russian had been here over a year without work. My friends thought I ought to do something for him. On the second day, he asked for a day off. I asked him—why? "It is a holiday in Russia," he replied, simply. Have any of your readers had similar experience? Yours etc.

Puzzled.

Locked In--With a Deadly Python

What Would YOU Do If You Were a Woman, Trapped in an Attic Room, Alone and Unarmed and an Angry 14-Foot Snake Attacked You?

Skull of a South African Python, Showing Gigantic Jaws.

Delicate Little Mrs. F. W. Fitzsimmons Scarcely "Registers" the Role of a Heroine Who Could Subdue a Menacing Reptile.

LONDON.

LETTERS just received by friends of Mrs. F. W. Fitzsimmons, wife of the director of the Port Elizabeth Museum, at Natal, South Africa, lightly describe her recent encounter with a giant python as "just another of our little exciting incidents." But behind the modest words lies a story of danger and valor.

Hazardous as life in the semi-barbaric obscurity of South Africa is known to be, and intrepid as British women are acknowledged all over the world, Mrs. Fitzsimmons's exploit—the subduing of a great serpent, without the aid of prepared weapons or human assistance—has few parallels. Many of her English intimates, women, like herself, delicately bred and reared in comfort approaching luxury, are for having her leave Natal and coming back to "civilization."

But there is little chance that she will listen to their pleadings. After all, when one has faced a python and "knocked it out," the terrors of the bush and hazzards of the field are apt to seem less terrible and hazardous than to the urban matron, whose biggest thrill is stepping into her limousine for a luncheon party or telling the housemaid to be sure to have the silver cleaned.

The "little exciting incident" to which Mrs. Fitzsimmons referred in her letters came as the climax to a series of warnings, preparations, fears—on the part of her husband—and promises "to be careful" on her part. For when the Fitzsimmonses first deserted the precise formality and calm routine of life in a great English city for the somewhat more varied calendar of Natal, Professor Fitzsimmons was fully aware of the chances they were taking. These chances were—and are—many. They include inconveniences and sometimes positive perils for people used to orderliness and safety. And they include, always, the snake peril.

South Africa is peculiarly rich in all varieties of reptilian life. But one of its chief products—and one of its most formidable menaces—is the python. They vary in size. Sometimes they are comparatively puny, a scant eight feet. Sometimes they attain an unusual length. But the one which tried to attack Mrs. Fitzsimmons was a super-python, measuring fourteen feet from tip to tip. It was, too, as thick as the average man's thigh.

"My dear," remarked Professor Fitzsimmons, with intense though affectionate gravity, when they arrived in Natal, where he was to take charge of the museum, "there are a lot of things here that will, no doubt, seem hard to endure. We won't get the food or the wine that we are accustomed to; we will have to put up with native servants and their (to us) curious ways; we will miss our neighbors and, perhaps, long for the theatre and the opera and the gayeties of a city.

"But these things are relatively unimportant. After all, we can stand anything that leaves us alive—and contented. But to be happy you must first guard against death. And I want you to stay away from snakes as you would from poison. Particularly, don't get near any pythons."

He went on to outline to her the habits of this non-venomous but deadly creature, and after he had lovingly lectured her for half an hour she called a halt to his affectionate tirade by putting her fingers over his lips and promising to exercise the utmost caution, both in the museum and outside the house. He was reassured, and the comedy-drama of their conference turned into pure comedy, with a touch of farce—for the moment.

Later it was to shift to the border of tragedy—tragedy which happily came to nothing more than a bad scare. Fitzsimmons, who is an expert in snake lore, was lucky enough to procure a remarkably fine specimen of python. This he intended keeping in confinement, where he could study its habits, physical peculiarities and reactions. But the museum, filled with fascinating volumes and specimens, was somewhat cramped. A fourteen-foot snake was just a little more than its founders had expected in the way of a "steady boarder."

Fitzsimmons was momentarily non-plussed. He didn't want the python to escape, thus doing him out of a priceless chance for scrutiny and note-making; he didn't want to frighten the Kaffirs working about the place by putting the reptile in a coop. So, much against his wishes, he was at last driven to conclude that the house was the best and safest place for the writhing "specimen."

He warned his wife that he was going to do this. "Remember," he added as a postscript to their first talk, "the little attic room, the one we never use, is the place where I'm going to put the python. Never go near it unless you positively have to; and never, never go inside."

Days, a week, two weeks passed. The snake reposed in the attic room; the professor was busy with his work in the museum, his wife occupied with the many details of housekeeping in a land where smart maids are not to be procured for a song.

The attic room had no particular attraction for Mrs. Fitzsimmons. In company with every woman, she had a wholesome and innate distaste for things that crawl. A lion, a puma, a jaguar—these she could have faced, perhaps, with a smile and a shotgun at her shoulder. But anything that creeps is naturally repugnant to her sex, and to most men as well.

Just how she came to forget, during her husband's absence one morning, that the python had been imprisoned at the top of the house, Mrs. Fitzsimmons is still at a loss to explain. Perhaps familiarity with the fact of its proximity had bred contempt for the warning of its deadly powers. Perhaps she was hurried and preoccupied that morning. At any rate, she discovered that some old clothing which she wanted was missing, and it was the work of a moment to dart upstairs, to unlock the door to the little room, to enter and look in the trunk.

She found the clothing, but she also found herself confronted by a sight that sent a thrill of horror through her. There, cowering in a gloomy corner, was the python, its great neck arching stiffly in preparation for the "hammer blow," with which it stuns its victims before closing in upon them.

Automatically, the woman tried to force the door. But the lock operated only from the outside, and there was no knob on the inside. It was a safety lock, too. She realized she was imprisoned.

At first the scene was not quite real to her, she wrote to friends. The fear of snakes implanted in her by nature and strengthened by warning, made the reptile resemble some fragment of a nightmare, some fear-phantom aroused in her mind, but without body or separate existence.

The reality of it all was born in on her when the bright eyes of the prisoner glittered and his coils began to undulate.

She Raised the Trunk Above Her Head and Brought It Down Upon the Python, Which Recoiled and Collapsed, Stunned for the Moment.

Realizing the situation, she mechanically put her hand up to her head, half-expecting to find a hatpin which was not there. Then she glanced about for a possible weapon—a firearm (she knew there were many in the house, put there for just such a contingency), a bar of iron, a log of wood.

"My teeth chattered slightly," Mrs. Fitzsimmons wrote to a woman friend in London. "I felt everything going black and was about to faint, I suppose, when for some reason I 'got myself in hand.' I remembered that I came of a race famous for its 'bulldog tenacity.' I thought how awful it would be if I were called a coward. I determined that I would fight my way to safety, gun or no gun."

The only available shield was the small trunk. Dragging it toward her, she first crouched behind it, then raised it above her head and brought it down upon the python. The blow was accurate, the snake recoiled and collapsed, stunned for the moment. And Mrs. Fitzsimmons ran to the window, called for help, and when it arrived in the form of an athletic and eager Kaffir she helped the tribesman to pinion the python.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons admits that she was slightly shaken by her adventure. "And yet," she concluded in describing the episode, "I don't think I shall leave Natal. City life would seem so dull without an occasional snake in the house."

On Links and Court

THE blocked silks and intricate weaves of the sports fabrics we knew a season ago have been replaced by simple materials with novelty trimming. Now we see the frocks for tennis wear with embroidered monograms on the blouses. On the links we encounter the new pantalette model of tweed. A touch of colorful print silk adds the desired spice of novelty to the plain frock.

Bonwit Teller & Fab. Studio

SPORTS clothes prove fascinating this season because of their clever touches of trimming. They are fashioned from simple materials, plainer in weave and design than the blocked silks we knew last Spring. Yet they lose none of their charm, since the novelties atone for the lack of intricate fabric.

For tennis, one could scarcely select a more appropriate and becoming model than the one illustrated in the picture of the large figure. Snugly comfortable is the blouse, falling into a colorful girdle at the hipline. The long, loose sleeves are banded with braid to match the girdle. The monogram design is worked in the fabric. To be more effective the former is cut out.

On the links one requires the pantalette costume to be truly comfortable. It is made of tweed, in a small check design, and fashioned to meet the needs of the athletic girl by showing a blouse beneath which will stand frequent tubbings. Silk and wool mixed hosiery are worn with this type of golf suit, and the small straw hat seems designed especially for the occasion.

Checks are woven into the knitted materials in fascinating decorative color schemes. An example of the current, clever way of combining the checks with a plain material is shown in the blouse illustrated herewith. Silk threads are knitted into the design, which forms the loose panel and sleeves. Silk and wool are combined in the plain material, and a belt is used to hold in place the loose back panel.

The sports season demands a wool coat and a practical hat. Light of weight, yet warm enough to slip on after a day on golf links or tennis court, is the coat of wool plaid, its collar and cuffs being embellished with bands of stitched wool. The simple beauty of the cloche hat is added to with a band and under-facing of the sheer material.

Narrow flutings indicate the snug lines of the frock, which is made impressive with drawn work fabric. A silk kerchief of Indian print is tucked into the side opening, and the fullness is slightly confined by the belt.

What Women Wear

Circular Flounces Have Gained in Power Since Last Summer So Women Have Consented to Adopt the New Kind of Skirt With Circular Flounces Below the Knees, Which Was Rejected Last Autumn. Circular Flounces On Sleeves Have Become Common-place, But Remain Fashionable.

THE house of Cheruit, in Paris, has been known to launch a hundred and one fashions. They are not always popularised in America by manufacturers, but they find their way, sooner or later, into the mass of clothes that flood our continent. When this house advanced the circular ruffle on coats and skirts last summer our American buyers looked at it askance. They didn't like that particular line, therefore they didn't bring the idea to America.

It took about three months for Cheruit to get this circular flounce into circulation in France, but when our American buyers went to Paris in February to buy the summer models that determine our fashions they accepted the flounced skirt and coat because it was established. They found that other French designers had followed Cheruit, they realised that it was a new coat, therefore it gave them something to sell with the punch or punchity behind it. The beauty of it is doubtful. The acceptance of it seems certain.

This three-piece costume, which serves for house and street, is of blue tricot with stitched design over its surface. The coat is the new Indo-Chine tunic. The skirt has the fashionable circular flounce below knees. This flounce, and also those on sleeves, are of plain material.

The sketch shows a three-piece costume which incorporates these flounces. You can see for yourself how you like it. Whatever your opinion about it, you will probably wear it if every other woman takes it up.

The suit itself is of navy blue tricot covered with a vague design of stitchery over its surface. This three-piece costume, like most others, is in two pieces. There is a frock to wear in the house or in the street on warm days, and a coat to put over it whenever occasion demands. This coat is in the new length, and is of the new kind; its inspiration was the Indo-Chine tunic. It reaches nearly to the knees, has slim lines, narrow shoulders and long sleeves, which are partly circular flounces. The skirt gives one-third of its length to a circular flounce of plain tricot. It has little fullness and is attached to a narrow skirt; this gives it a measure of grace.

There are other coats of the tunic kind with four or five ruffles on each sleeve; there are short coats with three circular ruffles around the hips, tilting upward in front to fasten an inch above the waistline.

Short capes have been returned to fashion, which serve as admirable foundations for flounces made of the same material. They have a picot edge or a fine cording as finish. It is a Second Empire fashion to be ruffled, you know. You may remember that the Empress Eugenie once wore a gown upon which Worth found space for one hundred and three ruffles.

The Household

WHEN YOU WASH THE FACE

FIRST of all, lift the muscles as you wash the face. That is, wash with all motions going upwards instead of downwards. Use very warm water and a mild soap, and always rinse in water as warm as the first you used; and in clear water—otherwise, soap will stay in the skin—and then end by a cold rinse. This does not take any more time than the slip-shod method.

Some women soap the washcloth full of—well, any old sort of soap, then lather over the skin, scrubbing about and pulling and jerking at the face any old way. The natural tendency is to bear hard on the downward stroke—watch yourself when you wash the face and you will see what I mean. This pressure comes particularly around the mouth, whose corners are pulled downwards.

Now all motions should be up—to raise the muscles that will sag downwards soon enough after you have passed thirty years. There is no reason why face washing should not be a beauty treatment as well as a cleansing one, you know. The washing should clean and stimulate the complexion, should bring new blood to the surface; and should leave the face feeling fresh and rejuvenated.

FASHIONS

Famous French Creator, Jean Patou, Gives His Viewpoint On Coming Styles

If every season's fashion bore a name it is certain that that of spring and summer of 1923 would be called "The Fashion of Printed Materials."

An immense effort has been made in this direction and all the large Lyons firms have rivaled one another in taste, science, coloring and design in order to present to the dressmakers a collection of printed crepes de Chine, muslins and crepes Georgette such as has never been seen.

I have commenced my summary with this information, for I consider that, since 1914, never has a prevailing note been so characterised as this season.

For nearly three years, I repeat every season that black cannot be eternally the foundation of dressmaking collections. I am pleased to be able to say at last: Black is dead! Long live colors!

Skirts begin to play a more important part again in the combination of the model. They become wider, ampler, either by means of pleats, panels or, more often, by the cut of the material "en forme." Normally, thanks to the law of good taste and rhythm at the bottom of everything, from the moment the skirt develops and becomes complicated the bodice and sleeves become simpler. Good by to the beautiful sleeves of these last few years, very much worked up and which, so to speak, constituted the dress by themselves.

Bodices and sleeves are to pass unobserved in the general silhouette, the dress as a whole attracting attention.

SPORTING CLOTHING

Every season sports costumes occupy a larger place in the collections of the Parisian dressmakers. By sports costumes should be understood not only costumes strictly for sports, but everything which a fashionable woman should wear at the seaside, in the mountains or in the country.

In this line of clothing there are two very distinct schools: sports costumes, clearly defined, and sports costumes which are fancy, picturesque and pleasing. The first are chic on account of the quality of the material, the moderation of the lines and because they require to be executed in a manner as impeccable as the best made men's clothes. These are the most difficult to make up successfully and they are the ones most preferred by the true sportswoman. On the contrary, many of our Parisians love sport, but they only understand it after their own manner and what they aspire to in it is, I believe, the freshness and prettiness of the dress. Here everything is allowed, the practical side is neglected and nothing is ridiculous.

TAILOR-MADE COSTUMES

I have wished to give back to the tailor-made, which has been discountenanced the last two seasons, the place it should occupy in a summer collection. In reality it is not precisely tailor-made, for nearly always a blouse has been designed especially to accompany the jacket and skirt, and care has been taken to render it harmonious as a whole when the jacket is removed. To my mind, the tailor-made thus becomes a "three-in-one" with only this difference—that the blouse is independent of the skirt, so allowing a variation in the blouses.

With regard to tailor-mades for morning wear, I have always had a weakness for the beautiful English material, and in spite of their high prices I have made use of several kinds.

With regard to more elegant tailor-mades, I would point out to you two new materials for these. First of all, here is a honeycomb cloth, very supple and heavy-hanging. Again alpaca, which, in spite of the difficulties in its production and its use, will play a very great role this summer.

I have definitely forsaken serges and reps, for they possess too poor an aspect for the new line.

In spring the tailor-made dress is very much worn, for it is practical and chic and it is agreeable, on a sunny afternoon, to go for a walk in a robe-monteau with a simple, and smart line and a fox fur around the neck.

As for the colors for the tailor-mades and tailor-made dresses for morning wear, I have used marine, all shades in beige and sable colors and, finally, an absolutely new almond green, which has an attractive tone.

In this category a large number of three-in-ones; garments so called by the charming logic of the dressmakers because they are composed of only two articles, that is to say, a dress and jacket.

My three-in-ones are sometimes in woole, but, above all, in Marocain, moire and even in very thick satin crepe. The dresses are simple and have a fairly narrow line, with color effects which are often daring in the bodice, in order to give the appearance of a very pretty afternoon dress when the jacket is removed.

Over these dresses may be worn jackets, but, above all, three-quarter length coats, with godets and fullness. This is where a truly new note is to be found, which gives a change from the straight hanging garments of the past seasons.

AFTERNOON DRESSES

In this very important class four categories should be distinguished—printed dresses, dresses of lace, dresses of self-color crepe de Chine and crepe satin and, finally, fine cambric dresses. I have already referred to the extreme importance of "print" in this season's fashions.

DRESSES OF LACE

Lace is not particularly fashionable, but I consider, however, that for the big race meetings or garden parties in summer months nothing is prettier than a well-charming dress of lace.

I have made several of those of the shades of beige and sable and I have utilised light lace in order to give them the maximum of youthfulness and simplicity.

Finally, in spite of the fashion for fancy fabrics, I have used thick crepe de Chine a great deal, and, more than any other, that of a reversible texture, which is shiny on one side and not on the other. This material is heavy, hangs well and allows new and moderate forms by the use of the right and wrong sides.

FINE CAMBRIC DRESSES

I have made a very few of these cambric dresses, for I consider that it is a little early to settle on them. However, I believe that they will be in favor this summer, especially if the weather is at all favorable.

With regard to the dresses of organdy, it is difficulty to change the 1860 silhouette, with its wide and lightly hooped skirt.

For the afternoon coats, which are so practical in summer, block manteau of a different color for preference, for it is evident that few women are able to have a manteau of a different color for each of their dresses.

The line of these coats becomes somewhat wider, still retaining, however, a general silhouette, fairly similar to that of last winter, the tightened effect at the bottom alone having been completely forsaken.

DINNER GOWNS

This category plays a very large part in my collection. It is at present the real style for the Parisian woman and it is certainly the most practical for summer. It is absolutely impossible to go to dine with a full evening dress when night falls late, and nothing is more ridiculous than a full

SHANGHAI, SUN DAY, JUNE 10, 1923

Auto Industry Trying For New Record Volume

Detroit, by mail.—Report issued by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce on April business, coupled with the announcement that a survey of the United States indicates a continuance of the present record business for at least two months, is influencing automobile factories here to extend manufacturing effort to maximum. There is little possibility of any curtailment in schedules before July, and for at least that time the earnings of factories should be at very high point.

The April production effort of the industry as a whole, a total of about 360,000 cars, would seem to indicate that new heights were impossible, but the industry has proved every month this year that still greater totals can be built and marketed. May, however, will probably witness the crowning month of the year, with a slight falling off in June and a rather general curtailment in July and August. It seems to be agreed that 1923 will see a resumption of the former slump in business but that fall business will be brisk and will compare favorably, if not show increase, over future years.

There is no evidence of difficulty in selling new cars in any section of the country, but there is a gradual piling up of used cars accepted in trade-ins which will, in all likelihood, require all dealers' efforts to move in the summer months. As a general rule, the used-car business has been good in practically every part of the country, and, in addition there has been a much larger percentage of new car sales in which no trade-in was involved. Much of this new-car business, however, has been going to persons who normally might have been used-car buyers, and this has cut down used-car sales.

Evidences of softening in the metal markets are resulting in greater caution being used in making commitments for material beyond the remaining months in the second quarter. It is expected that prices on commodities will show recession in the latter part of the year and the industry plans to take advantage of these. Materialization of these will make unnecessary any increases in prices generally, and it is likely that the large companies will maintain present prices in expectation of price drops.

The truck industry continues to show increase in production and is making steady gains despite difficulty in obtaining parts and material in quantity. Most of the truck companies here are operating on a scale just under actual sales, so that back orders are constantly increasing. This condition prevails alike with the large and small manufacturer, and if anything there is a tendency to keep manufacturing within the safety limit and prevent any possibility of overstocking. The dealer situation is much improved for the truck manufacturer, which accounts in large measure for the greatly increased business now enjoyed.

Plant sales executives are spending most of their time on the road to keep in close touch with developments. For the most part business is best in the East and along the Pacific Coast, with heavy buying throughout the central states. Buying in the farm districts continues light except in the low priced cars and trucks. Not much business is expected from the states west of the Mississippi before July and August, but following that it is thought there will be much better business for the medium priced lines. Tremendous tractor business is being done in these states by some tractor makers, production in this line in Detroit running far ahead of usual years.

Several new lines of cars are due to make their appearance shortly, one of which will probably inject a bit of excitement into the low priced lines. Manufacturers apparently are coming to regard color as a stimulator in buying, and the summer season will see some important additions which appeal directly to the eye. Several manufacturers in lines whose appeal has been somewhat limited have brought back volume business by getting out colored cars, and the habit is spreading.

Service has become the ruling passion with manufacturers in the recent past, and a large part of the engineering effort is now being expended in developing features which make the maintenance of the car cost less. Flat rate systems are now in effect with most manufacturing companies, and there are being supplemented by simplification of construction, making for still lower costs. The new cars of the year will see important changes along these lines, and from this time on the battle for business will be principally on service features.

Captain Bernard McMahan And J. W. Brooks

Capt. Bernard McMahan & J.W. Brooks

A "Pathfinder Car," driven by Captain Bernard McMahan and J. W. Brooks, Director of the American Highway Educational Bureau, is shown leaving the "Aero Milestone," at Washington, D. C., at the start of their tour across the continent. They will seek to determine the best route to be followed by a caravan of autos that will proceed to the Mystic Shriners Convention, in Washington, this month. McMahan and Brooks will lead the caravan from California.

Tires Require Less Pressure Than Formerly

It is no longer necessary to carry as much air in tires as in the past. At the same time underinflation is still the worst form of tire abuse. Proper inflation is necessary. The only difference is that tires are now built to require less pressure than in the past.

A new schedule of inflation and weights has been worked out by the Rubber Association of America, and calls for a minimum pressure of thirty-five pounds for a three and one-half inch tire to a maximum pressure of seventy pounds for a five-inch size.

The recommended air pressure means that the pressure should be kept consistently at the suggested figure and not permitted to fluctuate.

Since the air pressure question has always been more or less of a hoo-doo to tire users, tire manufacturers have been working to a point where less air pressure would be necessary and in line with this they have been bringing down the standard recommendations safely.

In the gradual development of the tire, laboratories and experimental departments have worked toward a tire that would meet the demands of the operator on the road, but which would not have to be taken and used according to certain specific instructions. In short, they have been working toward a sliding scale for inflation.

With the development of the cord tire it has been proved in actual tests, according to Miller tire men, that less air pressure is necessary. At the same time riding qualities of the car have been made much more comfortable without injury to the tire.

The accompanying table shows the ideal inflation to the amount of weight carried per wheel:

Inflation Pressure (pounds)	Min. 3½ in. fabric	3½ in. cord	4 in.	4½ in.	5 in.
35	375	425	..	..	..
40	450	500	700	..	..
45	525	575	800	950	1200
50	600	650	900	1050	1325
55	675	725	1000	1150	1450
60	..	..	1100	1250	1575
65	..	..	..	1350	1700
70	..	..	..	..	1825

The most important thing to bear in mind is that underinflation is far different from proper inflation. Proper inflation figures on a 3½-inch tire, for example, may vary as much as 20 pounds, according to the weight carried. In other words, for a 3½-inch fabric tire, carrying a load of 375 pounds, 35 pounds of air is sufficient. For a 3½-inch fabric tire, carrying 675 pounds, 55 pounds of air should be be used. That is a variance of 20 pounds of pressure in the same size tire, the difference resulting from increased load.

Ford And The South

The political bosses are said to be afraid of Henry Ford as a possible candidate for the presidency. The Washington correspondent of the Detroit News says that he is liked by the city workers, because of his high wages and the general liberality of his treatment of labor. He never has permitted the organisation of labor unions in his plants but he still has a certain appeal to important elements of organised labor, notably to the railroad brotherhoods, because of his efforts to increase wages on his Detroit, Toledo and Ironton line. The News says:

"By his scheme for development of Muscle Shoals he has fired the hopes of the South as no man has done since the Civil war. Rightly or wrongly, the Southern people believe the financiers of Wall street have deliberately withheld the capital required to develop the iron, coal and other raw resources of the South because they feared the resulting competition and oversupply would reduce prices."

He has the further advantage of an immense selling staff, who might easily be converted into hustling election agents. The strongest objection to his candidature is that he can do better work as a business man than in the presidency, where he would be so embarrassed with a load of unfamiliar duties that he might be unable to do the work for which he is specially fitted. Another President, willing to use business ability, might find him a good adviser and helper.

25 One-Man Cars In Race Classic

San Francisco, May 10.—The eleventh annual international 500-mile race on the Indianapolis Speedway May 30 will be a battle between one-man American cars and two-seated foreign cars, according to the latest reports from speedway headquarters.

Of approximately thirty-five cars already entered, twenty-five are American-built cars, of the one-man type, while those from overseas retain the customary provisions for a mechanician. This has given rise to the prediction that the mechanician, who has always been the second member of the racing crew, will soon make his farewell bow to the public.

Tommy Milton was the first to announce a one-man type of car, but he was rapidly followed by practically all other American drivers who have taken this means of cutting down weight and aspire to add a few more miles to the present record of 94.48 miles per hour for the 500-mile grind.

The present day speed models, like the Marmon Wasp, are built along airplane lines and follow almost in exact detail the streamline and fish tail design of which the Wasp was a sensational pioneer in 1911.

Lady Carnarvon Sets New Flying Record

London, by mail.—It develops that Lady Carnarvon, when she went to Egypt to see her ailing husband, who died there of the insect's bite, broke some records in aeroplaning for women. Her pilot tells about her willingness to run any risk to get quickly to the bedside. The journey was made in quick time. Its speed, indeed never before even was approached for the particular journey. She received the telegram telling of Lord Carnarvon's illness at 11 in the morning and with a specialist was in a plane early in the afternoon, reaching Paris and changing to another plane that afternoon at 4. She flew almost through the night and was in Cairo early in the morning.

Mexico Plans To Improve Her Road System

San Francisco.—The future development of Mexico depends on roads, and the Obregon government has taken the first step to secure them.

This is the message Frank E. Carroll, Pacific Coast manager of the New York Lubricating Oil Company, Monogram distributor, has brought back with him from Mexico. Carroll, together with Frank E. Carroll Jr., was a member of the trade extension excursion of the local Chamber of Commerce, which passed three weeks in the heart of Mexico as guests of President Obregon.

"When roads and highways are constructed in Mexico the greatest touring countries in the world will be opened to travel. Mexico, in points of interest in wealth, in scenic beauty, in everything that makes touring worth while, exceeds anything I have ever seen, and I have traveled the length and breadth of this land and Canada many times. It is a veritable paradise, just awaiting the coming of the automobile to make it one of the greatest countries in the world.

"Today there are only about 25,000 automobiles in Mexico and these are for the most part centered in Mexico City. They include many American cars but a great many fine continental cars are owned by the wealthy. Few closed cars are used, however.

"Traffic in Mexico City is handled well, and it needs to be, because for downright daring, for speed and for seemingly taking sure death chances the Mexican chauffeur has no equal. But these drivers handle their cars excellently, however.

"One of the peculiar rules in Mexico City prohibits the leaving of an automobile parked on the street without an attendant. Most Mexican families have small boys to remain in their cars while shopping or on business, and these are generally in livery. The reason for this law is to prevent stealing. If the cars were to be left without guards they would be stripped of their accessories which, however, could be located in the thieves' market without much trouble.

"Roads are few and very poor at present, but the government, which by the way, enjoys the complete confidence of the people, is planning built highways within the near future.

"Gasoline is high and sold by candy and ice cream stores, two in number, by the liter. A liter compares in the metric measure with our quart. It cost me $9:80 for a single filling and, if I remember correctly, this is at the rate of 80 cents per liter.

"The taxicab company—yellow taxies, by the way—is run by a young fellow who used to work for me in Sacramento as a tire salesman. His name is Charles A. Parmelee. Parmelee runs a good service and his rates are reasonable. In fact all automobile hire is reasonable. I rented a car and paid $2 Mex. or $1 gold an hour. The number of passengers fails to change the charge any."

Big Auto Company Buys Glass Plant

The production of automobiles during the remainder of this year will be vitally affected by the ability of the glass manufacturers to turn out plate glass in sufficient quantities to meet the demands of the motor car builders.

However, to avoid the possibility of being handicapped through this lack of plate glass, W. C. Durant, the automobile magnate, on December 20 last purchased the entire stock of the American Plate Glass Company. The plant of this organisation is located at Kane, Pa. It has a capacity of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 square feet of plate glass a year.

In commenting on Durant's purchase, Frank E. Welch manager of the Durant-Steves, Inc., Durant distributors here said: "The popularity of the Durant products is such that the demand is greater than the output, and in order to keep up as near as possible it was decided to buy this glass company so that no trouble would be experienced from this angle."

Australia Buys Cars Of Canada

In January of this year, according to reports to the Commerce Department from Consul-General Albert Halstead, Montreal, Canada, exported 4,666 automobiles, valued at $2,530,000. Of these the largest number went to Australia, 1800; and the next largest to the United Kingdom, 1564. Motor trucks exported numbered 369, valued at $141,261, three times the number and value of trucks exported in January, 1922.

During 1922, Canada exported 37,958 motor cars and imported 10,000 from the United States. It exported 2,564 motor trucks and imported from the United States 1250. The value of the motor cars exported in 1922 was $21,059,574, which was $7,483,395 more than in 1920, the next best previous year. Motor truck values, $1,094,519, were a little more than a third greater than in 1920, which was a large year for trucks, and $375,000 more than in 1921, which was a poor year.

The increases in Canadian automotive exports are to a large extent due to the establishment of American branches in that country, either for production of cars in their entirety in Canada or for the assembling of parts imported from the United States.

"Balloon" Tires Are Latest Experiment

American tire manufacturers are conducting experimental work with tires so large and thin that they have been described as "balloon" tires. The tires may be substituted for the present conventional sizes with a view to provide greater cushioning for passenger automobiles.

Brides Now Consider Changing Mode In Selecting Trousseaus

It's true that nowadays, nobody orders the dozens and dozens of everything that the once-upon-a-time bride considered necessary, for today looks that far ahead, not knowing what the mode will do. Yet the getting together of a trousseau is and always will be a matter for profound thought. A series of letters from all parts of the country ask for that "list for a complete trousseau" that the June bride considers the first step in her breathless progress.

It's equally true, of course, that such a list has to be modified to suit conditions and that nobody can do the modifying but the questioner herself. Yet, as a starting point for argument, it seems to be a help. So we're giving it here,

Tailored suit, tailored one piece dress, top coat (cloth or fur), two afternoon dresses, two dinner dresses, two formal evening dresses, evening wrap, two street hats, one afternoon hat, sports suit or skirts and sweaters, sports hat, two pairs of street pumps, one pair of Oxfords, one pair of afternoon slippers, three pairs of evening slippers, one pair of sports shoes, one bathrobe (warm), three pair stockings (sheer), two pair wool; fur piece— scarfs; six pair long gloves, handkerchiefs, veils, other accessories.

Bed linen (for each bed): Three pairs sheets, 1 pair blankets, 1 quilt, 3 bedspreads, 3 pairs pillow slips, 1 pair fine linen sheets and slips, mattress covers.

Miscellaneous: One dozen bath towels, 2 dozen hand towels, 1 dozen guest towels, 3 bath mats, 12 wash cloths, bureau scarfs, table covers.

Table linen: One large tablecloth, 12 large napkins to match (12 persons), 1 medium tablecloth, 12 napkins to match, 3 lunch cloths, 2 dozen or more lunch napkins, luncheon sets (doilies and centerpiece), tray cloths, &c.; 1 dozen glass towels, 2 dozen dish towels, dish cloths, 1 dozen roller towels, half dozen dust cloths, broom covers, &c.

FASHION STAMPS APPROVAL OF COMBINATION GOWNS

Fashion is usually a little skeptical of the ingenious. When a woman equips her kitchen she may look with favor on a motor that will mix cake, beat eggs, buff silver, knead bread and peel the potatoes. She may even view with tolerance, born of necessity, a device that makes an impromptu guest room out of the erstwhile drawing room. But if she is one of the discriminating she has no such toleration for presto-change costumery.

The new three or four piece costumes, so-called—for sometimes the words are misnomers and the four piece three—managed to pass muster. They do verge on the ingenious. They do provide two or three dress possibilities in a single costume. They do simplify the problem of dressing for possible changes of weather and for the requirements of different occasions. But their cleverness and ingeniousness are not obtrusive; they are merely incidental. And fashion has marked them with a big, unmistakable O. K.

They conform to no one definite type. Your three piece costume may be one thing and that of your companion at tea may be made up an entirely different sort of combination. Yours may be a three tier brown plaited crepe de chine skirt, worn with a tan organdie blouse with plaited ruffles at hips, elbows and neck, topped by a short cape of plaited brown crepe de chine tied at the neck with two inch brown ribbon.

And that of your companion over the teacups may begin with a a straight line printed silk frock, overtopped by a detachable tunic of beige crepe. The wrap she has just let slip over the back of her chair —really an integral part of the costume—is, let us say, a three-quarter length coat wrap of beige marocain heavily embellished with narrow tucks at shoulders, at hem and midway between.

Then you look up at the striking young woman passing your table and if your eye is keen for such matters you realise that she wears one of these new three piece costumes, but hers is of a still different type. It is of blue crepe—marocain—and don't forget that dark blue is gradually gaining back some of the territory lost to black within recent years. It begins with a skirt of the dark blue crepe drawn over toward the left side and showing what your dressmaker probably calls a "jabot drape"—the long end of the "jabot" falling in a point nearly to the floor. The blouse, no doubt attached to the skirt, though this detail you cannot see, is of beige georgette and there is a belted in sort of overblouse with a little short peplum that terminates in the back in a square cape.

These three piece costumes as presented this spring are in some cases evolved from the suit. In as many cases they are the outgrowth of the street frock.

Sometimes you may look upon this new combination as the old-time suit coat and skirt with the third piece—the blouse—usually attached to the skirt. Again you may merely think of it as street frock, with a wrap thrown in to complete the picture—and increase the dressmaker's profit.

It has distinct advantages, however you look at it.

It gives you insurance against your own possible bad judgment in selecting a suitable blouse to wear your suit; or wrap to wear with your street frock. There is a sort of economy about it, though the three piece costume will always remain listed among the more expensive offerings of the dressmaker. But in these costumes one has something suitable for vagaries in temperature and the demands of different hours of the day.

Some of them do come very near to the ideal of the busy women who a few years ago sought to work out the formula that would do twenty-four hour a day duty—starting you out quite appropriately, attired for war work or golf course and, with the skillful adjustment of a snapper here and there, as the hands of the clock went round, keeping you suitably attired for luncheon, for shopping, motoring, tea drinking, informal dining and more formal dancing. These gowns that never quite reached perfection might possibly have done so and would perhaps have solved the problem beautifully, had the problem not faded off into thin air like will of the wisps in the sunlight. Nobody really wanted that sort of dress. The woman who didn't have time to stop for a change of attire once from the hour of rising to the hour of retiring usually solved her problem by getting into something that would do and then avoiding afternoon and evening diversions that would make this something inappropriate.

But those three piece or four piece costumes, without making any pretense at solving any problem or lifting burdens of dressing off women's shoulders or satisfying the hopes of a single dress reformer, do in a measure offer the advantage of one costume with two or three possibilities.

Silk, both crepe and satin finish, is the material chosen for the wrap of the three or four piece costume this spring far oftener than the woolen materials that we once associated with the making of spring suits. The wrap itself is apt to be more voluminous. It needs a more pliant medium and a less weighty one if it is to be worn with any sort of comfort after spring air has lost the tang of winter. The regulation woolen suitings are remaining in favor for the strictly railroad two piece suit, but that, is an entirely different proposition. The line of distinction drawn between what the the French conveniently dismiss as a tailleur and the suit costume is wide and definite this spring.

These suits that we choose to call "mannish" have by no means suffered eclipse. Patou in Paris has been sponsoring them and has set the vogue for the straight, simply tailroad suit worn with a matching cape for early spring sport wear. But fashion no longer permits us to match our tailored sport suits with the verdant lettuce leaf, canned salmon or lavender hyacinth, as some of us did last spring. Any leftover of this sort that we may have on hand from last spring had best remain a leftover—or take a trip to the dyeing establishment. For the mannish suit of the spring is mannish in coloring as well. It is gray of the sort that we associate with well bred English tweeds, it is fallow brown, it is beige, it is occasionally, not often, navy blue, and it is white.

TUCKS ARE USED

Tucking must be taken into consideration. Perhaps it is a natural outcome of plaiting—and much of the new tucking really gives the effect of a plaited surface with the advantage that the tucks stay in place. Marocain and other crepes lend themselves well to this sort of device and not infrequently the wrap section of a three piece costume will show the tucking by way of making a more elaborate and heavier surface than that of the frock or tunic or blouse beneath.

In the beige crepe marocain costume shown there is a three-quarter coat wrap very heavily embellished with tucks that hang heavily over the crepe tunic beneath.

Crepe de chine is the medium of the tucks in the gray costume, and no fabric less pliant than crepe de chine could possibly be used for tucks of such circuitous constructions.

The more pronounced types of these new tucked frocks show straight all-over tucking from shoulder to hem.

There is a type of French three piece suit that shows horizontal tucking on the skirt and jacket—producing the effect of breadth of silhouette, which seems to hold less terror to the French woman of fashion than to the American. These tucks are placed three or inches apart—so that the straight plain skirt might have room for ten of them. The straight hip length jacket also shows the tucks in a front panel and three horizontal tucks appear at the end of the wide, long sleeves. It is not a suit that would appeal to the American who had not gone through a definite conversion to the distinctively French in clothes but it shows which way the wind is blowing.

First cousin to tucking comes cording, dear to the heart of the French dressmaker. These cordings are fine and are placed close, sometimes fashioning an entire shawl collar, wide cuffs to the open sleeves, and sometimes on a cape or wrap a wide band around the hem.

MUCH COLOR IN CLOTHES

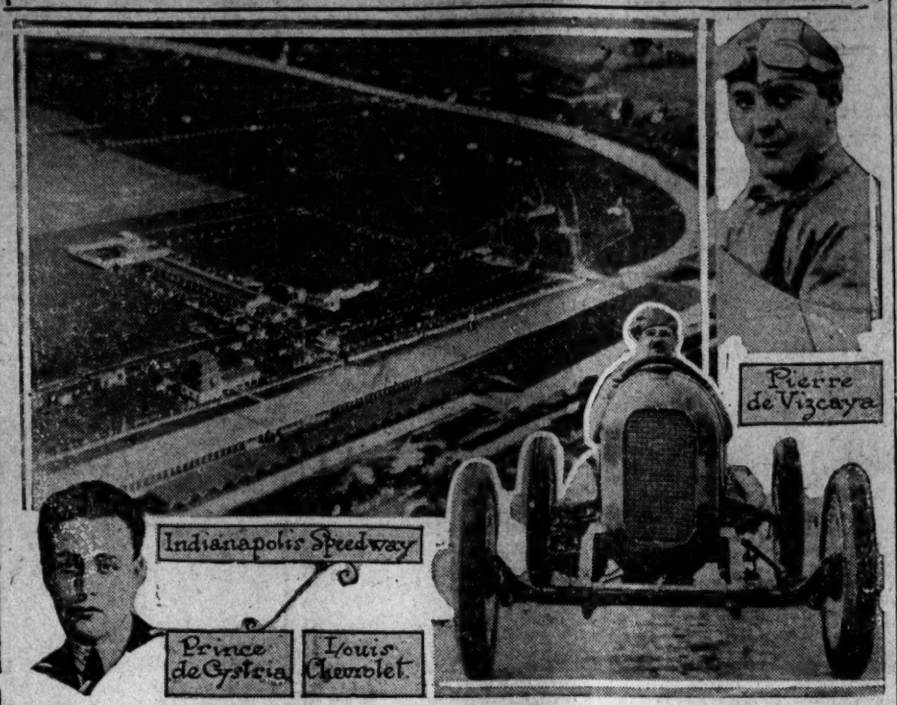
Frocks, hats, accessories worn outdoors at many of the resorts have been qualified by many an observer by that stock expression of theirs, "a riot of color." Perhaps it is easier to let it go at that than to try to trace any definite color trend in the motley of shades worn by women of varying taste and type. Then, too, when there are women in the picture wearing scarlet or bright blue or even green shoes to match scarlet, blue or green accessories, perhaps one is entitled to speak of the color scheme as riotious.

But there are still well dressed women who cling to their beiges, and browns, their grays and navy blues and even an occasional exempler of the truism that black is always good. To be sure, navy blue has regained much of its old-time favor in Paris. And it has regained this rather at the expense of black and the darker shades of brown than of beige. There is still something undeniably smart about gray, which for some reason or other never seems in any danger of being tricked into over popularity.

One hears much of the greens of the season, and often the most striking frock or suit you see in a group of expensively dressed women is green. Almond green is still good. And so is Lanvin green. Jades and emerald greens are not regarded as so suitable for daytime wear as for evening. There is a new green—there always is a green when the spring clothes show themselves, isn't there? And this green is hard to describe. Sometimes it is spoken of as a mustard green, but that all depends on what color you associate with mustard. At any rate, it is as crude and difficult as a mustard green. But for all that it carries an air of smartness about it.

Then there is the "whole gamut of color"—that is another way the situation is described—and clothes are spoken of as having run this —whatever it may be. This, too, is because in the favored hotels at tea hour you see less black and more warm browns than a season or two ago, because where you do see black you see it combined with terra cotta reds or greens or other combinations that we glibly call Egyptian—because there are a few purples—one well known actress has set the fashion for flame color combined with a vivid violet—because there are Egyptian or Cleopatra blues and odd greens that you cannot name; and because there are hats here and there with a perky trio of American beauty roses fastened at the very edge of the brim.

The Indianapolis Speedway And Drivers



HERE is an aerial view of the famous Indianapolis (Indiana) Speedway, where the eleventh International 500-mile Automobile Race was held on Wednesday, May 30. It shows a portion of the main stretch, with a suspension bridge over the starting and finishing lines, the press pagoda, the garages, infield and a portion of the first tour of the straightaway. The white building, with the white stockade around it, is the field hospital. Louis Chevrolet, veteran of many races, participated this year. Prince de Cystria, member of a French noble family, drove a French car in the race, while Pierre de Vizcaya captained the French team.

Monkey Leads Summ Fur Fashion In Paris

Paris.—Summer furs have made their appearance in Paris, coincident with the advent of the first really warm weather of the season.

Monkey fur is first really in the popular fancy, and is often combined with flying squirrel. Moleskin holds second place.

Fur coats and capes for summer wear are full length, reaching nearly to the bottom of the skirt. Some of the cape models now being shown have collars so large that they are left unfastened, forming what is virtually a second cape. Others have collars that resemble the Elisabethan ruff.

Rabbit, cured so carefully that it would probably fool a Hudson Bay seal itself, so soft and rich is its texture, is also in great demand. Gazelle is worn for short sport coats, in combination with the softer furs.

Conan Doyle Sadly Misled But Sincere, Says Jules Bois

New York, May 26.—Jules Bois, President of the French Psychical Research Society, is in New York, resting after a series of lectures on psychology given in New England.

An investigator of spiritualism for many years, M. Bois vigorously opposes the theories of Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's regarding "materialisations" as a business and spirit photographs as "piteous delusions."

Internationally known as a poet, playwright and novelist, M. Bois was Emile Coue's first teacher in psychology. "The beyond is within us" is M. Bois's answer to what he calls the "material and coarse spiritualism" that is being promoted today.

Asked by The World for his opinion of the beliefs expressed by Sir Oliver Lodge, M. Bois said that he admired Sir Oliver Lodge for his ingenious theories on the atom and his remarkable explorations in the domain of electricity and ether, but that he separated the prominent physicist from the "new spiritualist." If the one is precious to us, he says, the other leaves us in the very doubt.

"As to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," he continued, "we have read his novels with interest at hours of leisure; we believe him to be a man of sincerity, eloquence good intent and conviction. But when he clothes himself in the mantel of the apostle of a new religion which furthermore pretends to be a science, when it is based only upon fictions or premature conclusions, shall we be permitted to regret that such a famous name could have candidly become the cloak of hearsays and sometimes of piteous delusions?"

FIRST TO USE PHRASE

This formula, "The beyond is within us," Jules Bois was the first to express in his books and lectures, in the "Miracle Moderne," "L'Humanite Divine" "L'Audela et les Forces inconnues;" yet he knows that such has always been the belief of the great sages in the past and it is now the slogan of modern psychologists, who have verified by long and accurate experimentations the best intuitions of antiquity.

"The serious organisations," Jules Bois asserts, "established in Paris, London, New York (I helped the establishment of a new one in San Francisco) have already produced a vast amount of precious informations. Their first purpose was to expose the impostors. The next aim is to maintain committees to examine into hynotic trances, suggestions, autosuggestions, reading of the mind, psychoanalysis, premonitions, telepathy (the psychic radio), divinations, miraculous cures, table rappings, automatic writings, automatic work of art, haunted houses, etc.

"When the world was torn out with war, the investigations were of pathetic interest; at the same time they were in order to appease mortal anxieties and to develop the noble intercourse between our heroes disappeared into immortality and the hearts in mourning which call forth to them from the earth. 'War mothers, read!' said the headlines of of the Californian newspapers on August 28, 1917, about a lecture I gave that day. 'Jules Bois offers consolation. Proof of immortality.' I have not changed in 1923. The same message I give to the America of 1923, but I firmly believe as ever that this proof of immortality is not afforded by professional mediums. It is the allotment of ourselves, of all of us, if we know how not to materialise our incarnated spirit, nor to try in a funeral comedy to materialise our dear departed. Let us elevate our mind and, through a process of return into our spiritual profundities, meet there in the shrine of our soul the liberated souls who live within us. If we are recollected enough to listen to them, they can inspire, console and strengthen us. Unlimited are the powers of love, faith and inspiration. By mediation and prayer we liberate them. Prayer and mediation are not merely ecclesiastical practices, they are also scientific methods which work and give results.

GREATEST ADVENTURE

"What I want to say," Jules Bois goes on, "has no compact with bigotry and prejudice. On the contrary it is the consequence of long research during years of doubt, controversy, travels, trials, deceptions and hard work, up to the day when the road has been cleared up in the jungle of psychic and spiritual phenomena. May I be permitted to explain that from my very youth I have travelled all the world over studying religions and mysticisms in Africa and Asia? I have lived in European laboratories of psychology, especially in Paris. I had the great honor and luck of being the pupil of the two greatest masters in this field of knowledge—Charcot and Liebault, the one the chief of the School of La Salpetriere, Paris, the other the head of Nancy School. Hypnotism, suggestion, auto-suggestion are the key of the new psychology especially to control mediumistic phenomena, which are only auto-hypnotic dissociations of the mind. The apartment of course is vaster than the key." . . .

Julas Bois had made, himself, a long inquiry in the medieval occulty and magic; furthermore, in strict science, he worked with Dr. Luys, Dr. Dumontpallier and Dr. Beillon. He has been secretary of the Society of Psychology At the Polytechnical School, on the Mountain Sainte Genevieve, he began experiments on "the exteriorisation of the Sensibility" with the subject Lina.

He has been the friend of the well-known vedantist Vivekananda and has travelled with him; in India he frequented yoghis, in Egypt dervishes and fakirs. He experimented with almost all the famous sensitives, among them Eusapia Paladino, called the Sarah Bernhardt of mediums, and Florence Cook, who was employed by Sir William Crookes. He had long and instructive talks and friendships with Crookes himself. Hodgson and Podmore, in London. He speaks of Frederick Myers, author of "Human Personality" as the prophet of the the subliminal self. "He and William James," says Mr. Bois, "have been the highest and surest inspirations in my psychological career.

EXPERIENCE ABOVE BOOKS

"I think books are all right. We cannot do without them. Still a truth in a book is as if mummified. We get much more from vital experiences. The atmosphere of a man speaks often clearer than his writings. In fact I have learned more from a camel driver in the Sahara Desert (he was a marabout, a mussulman saint) than from the erudite lessons of prominent professors in the university of a civilised country.

"At all events we ended by verifying Myers' teaching the subliminal self. The subliminal self was a discovery as important in psychology as the discovery of America in geography. The subliminal is the new world on the map of human personality. An unexplored world within the souls of men. In its exploration there is the prospect of a spiritual development beyond the spheres and levels of attainment thus far reached. We had not lost our time and pains. The quest of the soul was a success; the greatest adventure became a spiritual conquest.

"But we find a frightful confusion of forces and powers in this subliminal self, the 'subterranean' structure of our conscious being, 'the crypts' of our soul. (Subliminal, of course, means below the threshold, below the level of the Room. When Dinner was announced they were always first at the Table. Instead of conversing with the Persons seated next to them, they humped over and got busy with the Vittles.

As for the Girls, they usually flocked in a Corner and had a Whispering Bee. At the Table they would get an Attack of the Giggles without letting any one else in on the Good Thing, thus making it very enjoyable for the Guests.

To cap the Climax, the Male Parent would usually try to lift the Gloom by swinging some ancient Wheeze outlawed by Haverly's Minstrels as far back as 1880.

He never could get a side-hold on Grammer and his accent was Bostonian. It was more suggestive of the Union Stock Yards.

Ma had a proud Chance to win a Social Standing so long as she was handicapped by that Band of Yokels. Just when she would be talking Art, one of the Boys would break in with a Demand for a second Helping of Cauliflower. Or else the Prize Blacksmith, in a well-meaning effort to be Hospitable, would urge the Lady Opposite to pitch in and Eat some more Chow.

After Dinner it often happened that Ma would tout the Accomplishments of the Young Lade Accordingly, they would be urged to Play Something at which they would hang back and snicker and do a Sis Hopkins Specialty.

While they were Killing Time, Father would usually fall asleep with his Mouth open, or else one of the Boys would upset something in trying to do a Sneak from the Room.

As soon as the last unhappy Guest had escaped into the Night there would be large-sized Roast waiting for the whole Combination.

Ma would sit up until 1 o'clock reminding them of all the Horrible Breaks they had made. She said that sitting around in the Kitchen cracking Hickery-Nuts was about their size when it came to playing the Society Game. She allowed that they would be more at Home if they moved out to some Ranch and associated with the Cattle.

When Ma got riled she forgot her Culture Club training and handed out a very Tabasco line of Conversation.

She said she was good and tired of trying to make Ladies and Gentlemen out of a Flock of Yaps who took after their Father.

At this she would get a rise out of Father. He said he didn't propose to strain himself being Polite to a lot of Four-Flushers who owed him Money.

That was the Trouble with Father. He was President of a Company, and seemed to think that his Official Position gave him a Right to break Crackers into his Soup.

He refused to wear a White Tie with his Evening Clothes just because some cheap Department Manager had set the Style.

As for the Offspring, they were too mullet-headed to get wise to Ma's magnificent System of doing the Heavy. When it came to a toss-up between a Pink Tea and a Variety Show, they put their Spending Money on the Coon Song. Any time that Ma dressed them up and took them out to meet the Elite they hung back.

At last Ma saw that the only Hope lay in shipping the whole Pack away to high-toned Schools in the East.

For several Years the Rising Generation put a Terrific Crimp in Father's Income, but at last they came home all speeded up, and then they were so Fly that Father could not travel in the same Class and even Ma could get a few Pointers from them.

At present they are tearing up the Scenery in their Speed Buggies and they have the Nerve to tackle any kind of Society.

THREE of the greatest of the German automobile race teams were entered in the annual 500-mile classic run May 30 at the Indianapolis Speedway. Max Seiler and Mechanician Johann Rieger handled a Mercedes entry; Christian Lautenschlager and Mechanician Krauss had a similar entry, and Christian Werner and Mechanician Karl Sailer drove another German car. American drivers do not carry mechanicians.

Sales Of Cleveland Show Big Increase

"Cleveland six sales have always been very good, year after year, but never as big as they are going to be this year, if present sales can be used as a criterion," says Sid Black, vice-president of the Cleveland Automobile Company.

"The new models of the Cleveland six have met with keen buying interest in all sections. Since January 1 orders have been coming into the factory in such volume that the production department has been obliged to increase its working forces. No sooner is a production schedule decided upon than a new one has to be worked out to keep pace with the number of orders being received.

"Factory production records indicate that February sales were 40 percent greater than were recorded for the same month last year. March shows a large gain. It was fully anticipated that Cleveland six sales would show a marked advance, but the way orders are now being received surpasses the factory's fondest expectatinos."

Nash Company Shows A Healthy Condition

Quarterly directors' meeting of the Nash Motors Company was held recently. The directors declared the regularly quarterly dividend of 1¾ percent ($1.75 per share) upon the preferred "A" stock, payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 20.

The question of the common stock dividend was not taken up as it has been always the policy of the Nash company to bring up the question of common dividend semi-annually.

As the last common dividend of $2.50 was paid February 1 of this year, consideration of a second common dividend will come before the directors at their July meeting.

The local year of the Nash company begins December 1. Vice President and Comptroller Alford reported net income for the three months—December, January and February—after selling, administrative and local and Federal taxes of $1573,241.78.

The factories of the company are running at capacity and in fact are unable at the present time to fill orders by a wide margin. Profits for March were not reported, but it is probable they will exceed the average for the preceding three months and the outlook for the next few months, at least, is excellent.

Vandals Strip Carthage Of Time-Honored Ruin

Paris.—Is Carthage, with her imposing remains of an older civilisation, going to disappear altogether, and will the very ruins be lost too? That is to be feared, according to M. A. Mounot, an archaeologist and member of the Grand Council of Tunis.

In 1862 Thomas Raid, an Englishman, in imitation of Lord Elgin, tore down the hot baths of Antonin in order to send their columns to London. This act aroused the indignation of the civilised world. But the French have done even more. They have destroyed the magnificent marble staircase of a hundred and twenty steps which led to the Platea Nova, taken down the small pillars, transformed the splendid cemetery of officials into a tillable field and converted the wall of Theodosius into road building materia.

At present the ruins of buildings and monuments of bygone days are not very numerous, and each year, according to Dr. Carton, corresponding member of the Academy of Inscriptions, five or six thousand cubic meters of stone are taken away.

A Windshield Cleaner With Big Advantages

Ryan and Hughes, the live wire accessory dealers at 1626 Broadway, have a new one—the Waycross automatic windshield cleaner that cleans clear across. It is operated by the vacuum of the engine and is made in various sizes to fit any windshield and can be attached in a very few minutes. It glides back and forth across the full width of the windshield and remains at the extreme end out of the way whom not in use.

BUYING ABILITY IMPROVES

What They Are Wearing In London

London, by mail.—It is a curious fact that although the changes in fashionable attire for the Englishwoman have been less violent than for generations, more dress shows have been held this spring by the big fashion designers in London than ever before.

At the moment the Englishwoman dresses practically as she pleases, avoiding all eccentricities and aiming always for simplicity and harmony in her dress. There has been a revival of the quaint patterns of the seventeenth and eighteenth century needlework for decoration purposes, and Eastern and Armenian trimmings are used a good deal, but otherwise there is little of the bizarre to be seen.

A NEW MATERIAL

English designers excel in tailor-made costumes. This spring a new material is being used for these suits. It is a very soft English tweed, and is made in delicate pastel colorings, quite unlike anything that has ever before been used for sports suits. Sand is perhaps the most favored shade, but delicate "oyster" shades predominated at Reville's spring showing of coats and skirts.

The skirts of these suits are narrow, though most of them have pleats, concealed or unconcealed, at the sides, and are neither short nor long. The cost is invariably short; in fact, the vogue of the short coat is in full swing here just now.

Suits have short coats, and short coats are worn with separate pleated skirts or overdresses of wool or silk. The coat of the three-piece suit, which is very popular here, is almost always a short one, with or without a band on the hips.

One feature of the new costumes is the huge silk handkerchief worn in the hip pocket. Last year sports suits had a little breast pocket out of which peeped the edge of a tiny brilliantly colored silk handkerchief. Today the handkerchief is larger even than the average man's size and is a square of gaudy colored material, not necessarily silk, with an inch of white bordering. Its purpose is to afford a contrast, and a good six inches of it is usually turned over the edge of the pocket.

COURT DRESSES

Paris has been trying to introduce the pork-pie hats and poke bonnets such as were worn in mid-Victorian days, but these are not likely to be seen much in England. A Parisian fashion, however, that is being copied here is the wearing of an evening hat, usually a glorified affair of gold or silver lame decorated with ostrich tips.

There is one place where the newest "Mummy" afternoon or evening frock will not be worn, and that is at the courts to be held at Buckingham Palace. There are discreet regulations as to what is to be worn and what not at these royal parties. In an office of the ceremonial department at St. James's Palace are sketches of court gowns, and ladies who are to attend any of King George's courts go there and study them. The sketches for this season's gowns have not aroused any great excitement, for the very good reason that they are identical with the debutantes' and matrons' court gowns displayed last year. Though many debutantes wear white, they are not expected to do so, for this year, at least, there are no restrictions with regard to the color of their dresses. Colored feathers, however, are not permitted, black, in cases of deep mourning, being the only exception.

evening gown or evening dress at nightfall.

It is difficult to say where the dinner gown commences and where it finishes. In principle, that which differentiates it from the afternoon gown is the absence of sleeves, but the materials employed are more or less the same.

EVENING DRESSES

The full evening gown, the sale of which is much less in summer than in winter, has, however, a reason for its existence, in the two big weeks—that of Paris and that of Deauville.

When I say full evening dresses I do not mean the extravagant dresses of pre-war days. I simply wish to infer that I have utilised either textures or embroideries of such a richness that this simple gown becomes elegant on account of the material, at the same time retaining the youthful line.

There are few lames, but, on the other hand, many embroideries. I have practically forsaken beads, for their easy use in ready-to-wear dresses has completely depreciated them. The new note is the use of white brilliants and pearls, imitations of all kinds, but with a predominance of brilliants.

EVENING CLOAKS

In evening cloaks there are two very different and pronounced styles: Those with pretty colors but fairly simple, which are intended to be worn over dinner gowns, and the very beautiful evening cloaks, which are scarcely seen pieces of apparel, in which gold work and embroideries are used unsparingly in order to render an effect of absolut magnificence.

I prefer to tell you that very few are sold, but nothing interests me more than to design them.

TEA GOWNS

Finally, in termination, several ten gowns of mousseline de soie crepe Georgette, fresh colored, preferably mauves, roses and yellows, intended to improve the person who wears them and to give her the maximum of charm.

EMBROIDERIES

There is a great deal of embroidery, but it should be used as an auxiliary in order to give a gay note to the general effect of the dress. I have above all, worked up a Persian, and Far Eastern idea in embroideries, for these seem to me to be the height of decorativeness on account of their wide coloring and the admirable rhythm of their designs.

There should be noted, however, several embroideries of Rumanian and Hungarian lines with bold colors and somewhat simple but charming designs.

To sum up, a very clear tendency to widen the skirts and simplify the blouses, the complete return to colors, a frequent use of embroidery and, above all an abundance of printed textures

Autos Popular In Shadow Of King Tut Tomb

One of the most promising parts of the world from the standpoint of commercial activity is the land of King Tutankhamen, according to J. Walter Drake, Chairman of the Foreign Trade Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, interviewed in New York on his return from Europe, aboard the Olympic.

Drake has been representing the automobile association at the International Chamber of Commerce meeting on highways at Rome. He also visited Egypt, France and England.

"Egypt is one of the few countries whose currency is nearly at par," said Drake. "Under the British protectorate the country is improving rapidly. Irrigation and other modern methods are being introduced. Motor travel is sure to increase.

"Two or three years will be needed," Drake observed, "for the foreign trade situation between this country and Europe to work out favorably. Particularly is this true of Italy and France. In Italy living conditions, wages and materials are at such cheap levels that American products cannot compete.

"Living conditions, however, are bound to improve with consequent higher cost of production, greater buying power and better markets for American goods. The thing that will be most beneficial to international trade is a more thorough understanding by Europe and ourselves of each other's difficulties."

Huntress To Go After Big Game Alone In Africa

New York, May 6.—With elephants and lions already to her credit as a huntress, Mrs. Dena A. Akeley will sail on June 1 for British East Africa and Uganda to fulfill a commission given her by the Brooklyn Museum. Her two previous expeditions were made with her husband Carl Akeley. This time she will go into the wilds with a caravan, or natives, but no white companion.

Mrs. Akeley is the first woman commissioned by a museum to go alone after big game specimens. Her mission is twofold. Antelope will be her chief prey. The other phase of her trip is an investigation of life in native villages. She expects to penetrate to regions beyond the fringe of the white man's domination, live in native huts and make a study of the domestic life of about thirty tribes.

ENTHUSIASM, BUT NO FEAR

In spite of her white hair, Mrs. Akeley starts on the venture fearlessly and with enthusiasm. When one has once hunted big game the fascination holds through years, she says, and she recalls with pleasure her expeditions in 1905 and 1909, when she shot lions and elephants and tasted the jungle life to the full. She was the first white woman to go among the native tribes of British East Africa after they were subdued by the British. She speaks Swaheli, the trade language of the country, and through this medium she hopes to obtain detailed knowledge of the customs of such native tribes as have not succumbed to the white influence.

"You can learn nothing from these people by making a casual visit," she said yesterday in outlining her plans. "You must go right among them and stay until they trust you. The natives who have come into contact with the whites have been spoiled. There is much more to be learned from those who still are remote from civilisation. I shall try to reach the most distant tribes."

HUNTING ON BICYCLES

Mrs. Akeley will travel with a caravan of fifty natives. In British East Africa mules are available, or one may be carried. In Uganda it is more usual to hunt elephants on bicycles. Mrs. Akeley recalls many bicycle-riding expeditions after elephants, which she considers more dangerous than any other jungle beast.

"We have often jumped off just in time to avoid them," she said. "We used to see them in hundreds in the district between Lake Albert and the Nile. In that part of the country they are very vicious. One that I shot charged us three times. In the great jungles they move with surprising speed and stealth. We ride along the trails they make, but you have to be expert on a wheel to keep going on the rough tracks."

Mrs. Akeley wears riding breeches, khaki shirt and helmet on the trips. Her rifle is always ready for action. She tells of a night when she was watching for lion in a boma, a hut made with thorns. She was in British East Africa and had just left Colonel Roosevelt's party.

FEELS LION'S BREATH

The eyes of an approaching lion could be seen gleaming through the dark. She shot and the animal fell twelve steps from her. It happened that it was mortally wounded, but she did not know it and spent what she now calls the most uncomfortable minutes of her life in the ensuing moments. Every time the lion roared its hot breath flicked her face. The roars grew feeble, however, and soon it fell back dead.

"I hate the actual killing," said Mrs. Akeley. "I would never think of doing it except for scientific purposes. The strain on these trips is great, too, for you must be on the alert every minute of the time. You need to take good care of yourself and I have been fortunate never to have had fever."

She will not work from any definite headquarters on this trip. Her caravan will take all provisions with it. When they pitch camp she sees that her housekeeping is as thoroughly done as if she were at home. The natives need to be watched continually, and she holds camp inspections to keep them up to the mark.

Defeat Called Hard Luck By Radoslavoff

Paris.—Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian war Premier, was condemned recently to imprisonment for life, along with various other Bulgarian war criminals. He has the advantage of most of his colleagues. He lives luxuriously in Berlin, where justice cannot overtake him and where he is indulging in the universal passion for writing war memoirs. He has divulged some facts about his forthcoming book to a Berlin representative of "Le Temps," saying, among other things:

"It is not written to please you [the French]. It contains documents which will throw a disagreeable light on the role played by your former ally, Russia. In my opinion the Russian government bears a great part of the responsibility for Bulgaria's entry into the war. The way in which our ancient protectors left us in the lurch to favor the cause of Serbia caused the sharpest irritation in Bulgaria. Our people seized the first opportunty offered them to realise their national aspirations, which the Treaty of Bucharest had not permitted them to attain."

WAR CALLED POPULAR

"Do you claim tha war against the Allies was popular in Bulgaria?" he was asked.

"Why not?" he answered. "Undoubtedly today people will say the opposite, because we were beaten. But ought I to shoulder the responsibility for an unfortunate war? With us it is exactly the same as with Germany. If we had been victorious everybody would congratulate and flatter us because we were for the war."

"What do you think of the assertion that the Entente might have kept Bulgaria neutral, or even have drawn her into the Allied camp?"

"It is perfectly true and certain documents in my memoirs will prove it. If the Entente had offered Bulgaria the concessions which she demanded in Macedonia we would have been ready to send our armies against Constantinople. The government of France and Great Britain were wrong in depending so much on Russia, which was pursuing her own special aims in the Balkans.

GAME PLAYED ON CHANCE

"There was, as you know, no special animosity on our part against France or against Great Britain. In the course of 1915, after the failure of the Dardanelles expedition, the cards seemed to us to favor the Central powers. We played those cards. Fortune wished it that they should be bad. We lost the game.

"Today they want to punish us—my colleagues and myself—because we were bad card players."

Ludendorff objected strenuously to being described in the Reichstag as a "gambler." Radoslavoff has no such compunctions. The only thing of which he is ashamed is that his gamble failed.

Culture Crusade Holds All Classes In Mexico City

Mexico City.—The cultural campaign begun by the fine arts department of the Ministry of Education is meeting with success and has spread to all parts of Mexico. A Pro-Culture League has been formed, having its headquarters in Mexico City and branches in various parts of the country composed of scientific and literary societies.

An interesting feature is that a number of the governors are taking a great interest and in a number of cases have placed themselves at the head of the movement in their state.

A number of moving pictures are being prepared by the Department of Education to aid in the work of educating the vast number of unlettered in the country. Cultural festivals also will be held, in which the people of the communities will be entertained with educational programs. Arrangements are being made so that even prisoners may attend these programs, as well as musical and literary festivals.

Sun's Cooling Harmless, Says Weather Chief

Washington, by mail.—"There is no occasion for any alarm over the slight chill the sun recently experienced, and farmers need not get nervous over failure of crops this summer on that account." This reassuring statement was made by C. F. Marvin, chief of the Weather Bureau, in discussing the recent declaration by Dr. C. G. Abott, of the astro-physical observatory of the Smithsonian Institution, that the sun is sending out less heat to the earth by a few percent than usual, and that this is a prelude to unusual weather conditions.

Dr. Marvin was not inclined to comment on the sensational interpretations placed by some writers on the observations of Dr. Abbott, but he called attention to an article by Dr. Abott on his observations of solar radiation in the current issue of the Monthly Weather Review, which is published by the bureau.

FACTS NOT SENSATIONAL

"All sensational statements about the remarkable effects of the slump of a few percent in radiation intensities on the weather are conspicuously absent from this article," Dr. Marvin said. "All Dr. Abbott says, after describing the slow decline in solar intensity after November, 1921, reads as follows:

"'Unpublished observations at Arizona and Chile since September, 1922, indicate that the low solar values continued and perhaps became still more pronounced. Whether this has an important bearing on the unusual weather conditions of recent months, will be for meteorologists to decide.'

"I heartily subscribe to the purport of this conservative statement. Incidentally, the pleasing little challenge it carries to the meteorologists to show what the weather responses are to changes in solar radiation is heartily accepted by myself and technical staff of the Weather Bureau. In any case, I desire to assure the public there is no occasion for any alarm over the slight chill the sun recently experienced, and farmers need not get nervous over failure of crops this summer on that account.

CONDITIONS BEING STUDIED

"Experts of the Weather Bureau have not, up to the present time, had an opportunity to subject the observations and conclusions of Dr. Abbott to searching examination, but the subject is under constant study and the public will have the benefit of any conclusive results obtained.

"The Weather Bureau cannot justify any statement that the weather, especially for the whole earth, has been unusual within the period of the solar changes considered. Weather conditions are always more or less abnormal over some portions of the globe at all times, and to prove a claim it is always easy to pick out times and localities favorable to any theory or forecast one may wish.

"I regard Dr. Abbott's solar observations of the greatest possible value to science. It is exceedingly important to know whether the solar heat reaching the earth may change with time, and if so, how much; and a long series of observations is necessary for this purpose. The responses of the earth's atmosphere to such changes can be fully worked out only when many observations are available, and meteorologists earnestly hope the splendid work of the astro-physical observatory may be enlarged and continued indefinitely."

Eyesight Test For Motorists Is Plan Proposed In France

Eyesight tests for motor-drivers have been proposed in France. For some time past, it is reported, medical associations in France have been much concerned by the increasing number of automobile accidents and a special committee was finally appointed to investigate the problem with a view of drawing up resolutions concerning sight tests for motorists. This committee has now reported in favor of compulsory eye tests of motor drivers and the refusal of licenses to those suffering from certain eye troubles.

Among the eye ills which would bar a man from driving a car, under the proposed regulations, are: Blindness in one eye, hemianopsia, or restricted visual field, diplopia, or double vison, hemeralopia, or day blindness. In this last state the suffered sees objects better at might by electric light than he does in the daylight. The committee recommends that all motor drivers be examined at regular intervals and that whenever an accident occurs the person concerned should be especially examined.

GALLOPERS CLASH WITH JAPANESE TEAM TODAY

To Play Mitsubishi Nine —Last Before Dia Meis

MEET TUESDAY

Kingman To Drill His Charges At Skull Practice

The baseball game that was to have been played yesterday between the Shanghai and Mitsubishi teams had to be postponed on account of wet grounds, but unless more rain falls the contest will be staged this afternoon. The ground dried out fairly well yesterday and judged by appearances last night will be in first class condition for the game today, unless, as stated, old Jupe Pluvius goes on another of his customary rampages, as he threatens to do every minute.

Manager Gallop and Captain Kingman are banking a good deal of this game today, as it will be the last opportunity for the boys to show together before the opening of the big series with the Dia Mei team of Osaka, Japan, which will be here Tuesday for one of the most important series of games of the summer.

On Tuesday evening there will be a meeting of the Shanghai team at the clubhouse for practice, and also for skull practice. The signal system has not been perfected this year as yet and Captain Kingman wants the players to be on their toes every minute when the Japanese team gets here, as a single slip, either mental or mechanical, may cost a game.

It was not announced last night who would pitch today's game although both Taylor and Scotty are ready. Both may be used.

The series with the Osaka team will undoubtedly prove one of the biggest baseball attractions of the year and Manager Gallop is making arrangements to handle a record crowd.

SPORT AND STAGE
BY DOMINO

SHAKESPEARE AND TENNIS

What treasure uncle?
Tennis balls my liege.
We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us;
His present and your pains we thank you for:
When we have matched our rackets to these balls,
We will in France, by God's grace, play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler
That all the courts of France will be disturbed
With chaces.
[From Shakespeare's 'Henry V.']

So tennis was played in France some five hundred years ago if we are to believe Shakespeare! It is only natural then that the same country should produce Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen. Coming a little nearer home it is interesting to note that Mr. A. W. Gore—a world champion at the game on three occasions—learned the rudiments of it at Dinard, in France on the hard sands there. We are to see him in action against Mr. Parbury next Wednesday at the Lawn Tennis Association's new courts, situated in the grounds of the Hotel Majestic, Bubbling Well Road.

I had the pleasure of meeting Arthur Wentworth Gore at tiffin at the Astor House Grill on Friday last, when Mr. Noel Ramsey, a champion tennis player of many years, was our host. During a perfectly delightful tiffin we talked tennis. Despite his modesty, Mr. Gore was unable to disguise the fact that he is a tennis enthusiast. He is a slim cut, medium height man. He looks like an officer in a crack corps. He is wiry and his stamina—despite his fifty odd years—is extraordinary. That he looks like a military man is only natural. His father was Augustus Wentworth Gore of the 7th Hussars. His mother was the Honorable Mrs. Gore.

He is out here at present on business. By the way he has been in business from an early age despite the fact that he has gained championships all over Europe. He has been able to combine business with pleasure and thus maintain his absolute amateur status. One of the things he said on Friday was that tennis was a game in which a busy business man could do well because it did not demand, like cricket for instance, two or three days to complete a match.

I asked him how he came to take up the game. He replied that it was more by accident than design. He was taken to Dinard as a boy and played upon its sands with those around him. His father was keen on the game and one of the mottoes that was hung in young Arthur's bedroom was "Place with pace." He has been a firm believer in it ever since. He has never had any expert tuition and has never gone into anything like training. He likes his smoke, he evidently enjoyed his tiffin on Friday, and he whispered that he always likes a pint of champagne before playing a strenuous match. Today he is as spry as the youngest and thoroughly enjoys a dance.

By the way Jacques Klass, the manager of the Astor House, will like to hear this. As we were leaving the Grill Room Mr. Gore stopped and gazed at the dancing floor and murmured "This is the best thing I have seen on my travels."

If I were to give you a complete account of his many triumphs I should have to commandeer the whole of the Pink Sheet and that would never do, So let a short summary suffice. It was in 1880 that Mr. Gore won his first prize on the gravel courts of Dinard. He was twelve years old at the time. Now then, reckon it up! His first success in England was at Stamford Bridge, then the headquarters of the London Athletic Club. In those days this club drew all the stars of the different games to its venue. Tennis was one the sports for which championship honors were awarded, and in 1887 he made a decided impression and in the next year ran out as champion.

Since then Mr. Gore has gone from one success to another. Champion of Kent, London, Dinard, Surrey, Scotland, the North and Paris, etc.—and champion many times—he in 1901 gained highest laurels by winning the World's Championship, beating that tennis wizard, R. F. Doherty. He repeated his success in 1908 and 1909. He won the Covered Courts Championship in 1900 and 1908, and the London Covered Courts in 1903.

In 1900 he captained the first English team against America, playing at Longwood, U.S.A. He also represented England against Australia in the Davis Cup in 1907.

Every year since he has been well to the fore in all the big tournaments and must have created a record in appearing at Wimbledon last July for the 31st consecutive year. He is considered a veteran but there are lots of the young folk who would like to have his present speed and generalship at the games at which he excels.

Even as late as 1921 he won the Doubles and Mixed at Bristol. He is a vice-president of the Lawn Tennis Association, and when championships were not being competed for during the War, he kept hmiself busy as a member of the National Guard.

His advice to players is to watch your opponent, place your ball, anticipate its return and again "Place with pace."

I asked Mr. Gore his opinion of the famous Suzanne Lenglen. He said simply that she was the greatest woman tennis player the game had ever produced or probably ever would produce. He is also enthusiastic about Shimidzu. He spoke of the Japanese as a fine player and a gentleman, wherever he played he was popular and deserved to be. Mr. Gore is hoping to play a few games in Japan early next month.

"What chance has China in tennis?" I asked. He was very decided in his reply. He said that China would have its team in for the Davis Cup in the not distant future and that the country would do well. "Those markers are wonderful. They have fine eyes and they have a natural bent for the game. They are quick on their feet and handle their rackets well." This speaks well for China and with Chinese winning the championship at Hongkong and putting up fine games here

Hey! Knute

To The Sports Editor:—On the occasions of the last two fight nights at the Stadium the management took a lot of pains to introduce Knute Hansen, who challenges the world, particularly Jack Dempsey, for a fight. Last night we had in Shanghai a pugilist by he name of J. E. Martin who made three endeavors by 'phone to make arrangements for a fight. Mr. Hansen, who for reasons known to himself only, chose to decline.

Mr. Martin has been champion of the A. E. F. and would be willing to meet any man in China at any weight, at any time and for any satisfactory purse.

Sarazen Calls Plenty Of Sleep And Natural Way Of Playing Golf Essentials

BY ROBERT EDGREN

I saw Gene Sarazen and Jock Hutchison play one of the greatest games of golf in all the history of the sport. The match was at Annandale, in Pasadena. The rivals who went down to defeat were the same who twice beat Hutchison and Barnes last year, Eddie Loos and Dr. Paul Hunter. Eddie Loos, professional, was fresh from winning the Southern California Open, in which both Hutchison and Sarazen competed. Dr. Hunter is one of the best amateurs in the west.

It was the team work of Sarazen and Hutchison that was so amazing, and their individual play was the play of two of the greatest champions of the day. Their best ball for the 36 holes of the match was 128. For the two eighteens it was 63 and 65. Sarazen, at the very top of his magnificent form, shot 67 and 70 in the two rounds of a 71 par course, and Hutchison's rounds were 72 and 69. Sarazen broke the course record. It was Sarazen's first game at Annandale. The match was won 12 up and 10 to play.

At dinner the winners were consoling the losers.

"Never mind", said Loos, "I'm not worrying. No two golfers that ever lived could have held you off today."

After the match I talked it over with Sarazen and Hutchison.

"How did you start playing golf?" I asked.

"I started when I was nine years old," said Gene. "When I was caddying I played every minute I could get, practicing shots. If I had a boy I'd start him playing golf as soon as he could swing a club. I'd teach him a few things and then have him play every day on the hardest course I could find. The only way to learn how to play is to practice where you have to surmount difficulties.

"I wouldn't teach him very much. I'd encourage him in playing in a natural way without thinking too much how he played his shots.

"I learned that way myself. I played a long time and got a natural swing and a natural way of playing all my shots before I began to see many of the great golfers. When I began playing around tournaments I watched some of the champions and picked up a few points here and there that improved my game. But I have not gone into it too technically. You can study golf too much. After all it's a matter of hitting the ball in the way that is natural to you. I think Jock is one of the greatest match and medal players I ever saw, and he is showing me many things that will improve my game.

"But I am not going into the technique of playing shots too much. I have worked out my natural way of hitting and don't want to lose it by getting confused by studying too much in detail.

"My idea is always to hit a perfectly straight ball. I never try to hook a ball. I can slice or hook when I need a slice or a hook, of course, but that is very seldom. A straight ball that travels right where you want is to go is always the best.

"I know a lot of good golfers like to drive with a slight hook because a hooked ball travels. But I can make a straight ball travel well enough, and hitting them straight, I

Captain Hayward's Eleven Defeats The Club 135 To 108

The Machine Gun Co. beat the Cricket Club "B" in the only league match yesterday afternoon by 27 runs.

Owing to the sodden state of the ground there was no play on the Rec's ground between the home team and Cricket Club "A."

W. N. Hansell who has just joined the Machine Gunners was top scorer for the afternoon with 38 runs. Clifford with his slows was the most successful bowler with 4 wickets for 15 runs.

It is interesting to note that only 2 batsmen were bowled, and no less than 4 out l.b.w.

Hayward won the toss, and on a sticky wicket which was rapidly drying decided to put his side in first. Hansell and Green opened the innings against the bowling of Read and Peck.

The start was promising, the first wicket put on 28 runs when Green was caught in the slips by Nicholl off Peck. Leach and Hayward were cheaply dismissed, Bichard held Leach who did not drive his off ball far enough and Hayward was caught by Raikes in the same way.

This did not look hopeful for the Gunners. Hansell who had been doing most of the scoring, though missed twice in the slips, succumbed eventually to an l.b.w. appeal from Clifford.

Duckitt and White, the next pair, stayed together for nearly 20 minutes, though the scoring was slow and fielding specially good. The partnership was broken when Bichard caught Duckitt at near fine leg off Clifford. White was caught in the next over by Raikes. Rogerson followed but after snicking a boundary and a single he called a very short run and was too late.

The score was now 91 runs for 7 wickets and the last 3 batsmen put on 40 runs, Rawsthorne and Baker hitting out well, the former hitting a six in his 15.

E. G. Barnes was again not out when the innings closed for 135.

Though this score looked small enough there was some doubt as to whether the Club could get the runs, the wicket having been rather badly cut up and still soft.

Moule and Bichard opened the innings. In the second over after hitting a boundary and a single, Bichard was out l.b.w. to Leach. Evans joined Moule who was in his usual splendid form and between them put on 30 runs for the second wicket before Moule was also out l.b.w. to Rawsthorne (39-2-17).

Muriel followed but did not stay long with Evans who was c. and b. by Rawsthorne with 18 runs to his credit. Clifford and Nicholl followed and it was not until Raikes came that Muriel began to score.

After a couple of boundaries and a two he settled down and made 26 when he was caught by Barnes behind the wicket in attempting to score off a leg ball—91-7-26.

This was the beginning of the end, Raikes only of the remaining batsmen reached double figures. The innings closing just before it was too dark to play, for 108 runs.

America To See Scottish Football

London, June 6.—America is about to get a taste of Scotch football.

Six Scotch First League Association football players have accepted contracts to play the game in America where an effort is to be made to introduce football as played in Scotland. The players will leave Glasgow this month.

SARAZEN SAYS PLENTY OF SLEEP IS AID TO GOLF

hit every ball in the same way. If you try to use a slight hook you'll get a big hook when you don't want it, and get into trouble that will cost you strokes.

"It's the same with putting. I don't want any fancy curves on my putts. I try to hit every putt, absolutely straight.

"I intend to go to England and try for the British Open Championship. When I get home I'll play golf everyday. There's nothing like playing every day to keep your touch for all shots. A golfer who can play only once or twice a week is handicapped. That's all right for an amateur, but a professional who has reached a certain standard and must keep it up and try to improve it must play all the time. It may be a good stunt in any other kind of athletics to lay off and rest for two or three days before a big competition, but that doesn't go in Golf. If I didn't play for three days before a championship event I'd have no confidence in my shots, especially in putting.

I have had a bad putting streak, and in fact ever since my operation for appendicitis I have felt uncertain of my drives and my putts. I am just getting over it now, by playing every day. You have to be full of pep to play championship golf. I haven't had the pep, but it's coming back.

"Playing 36 holes in an easy match doesn't tire me, but I'm often tired after a hard, close match. Being tired doesn't show on the tee or in approach shots, but it gets you on the greens.

When I'm just right I feel that I'm going to put long putts close to the hole, for a sure two if the first putt doesn't roll in. When I'm tired I'm likely to roll my long ones past the cup far enough to be likely to miss, coming back. That's where sleep counts. If you get your sleep regularly every night you never feel very tired, and when you aren't tired, you don't get careless. You always feel that you don't get careless. You always feel that you have the touch for all shots and especially for putting. That's where confidence on the greens comes in. You must feel that you have the touch.

"What some people don't know about golf is that most of the shots depend on leg work. You [illegible] or any kind of athletics—the legs do most of the work. [illegible] the important thing. Some people will tell you about how to grip the club, how to start the club back, how to start it down, how to 'promate' (whatever that is) to sway the hit back and forward—all that sort of thing. But I don't want to get my mind tangled up in all those details. If you use your legs right you can't help hitting the ball right."

Here Sarazen jumped up to illustrate.

"See here. It's easy to cure a slice if you hit this way. I swing the club back and my left knee comes forward. If it didn't I'd be tied up so I couldn't swing freely Then I start the down swing slowly. It's a big mistake to try to whip the club fast at the top of the swing. Just as I almost reach the ball my right knee comes forward. You can't slice if you do that That's where footwork comes in. In the last few inches I push the club-head forward by putting my wrists and forearms into the swing all there is to driving.

"I have this natural way of hitting and I don't vary it. I'm going to keep on hitting in the same way for at least three or four years more. I'm not going to analyse my shots or find out every detail of the best ways to play shots for three or four years. By that time I'll have my natural way of hitting in my system so that I can't lose it, and then perhaps I'll experiment around a little. But not before. The worst thing a golfer can do is to try experiments and keep changing until he loses his natural style.

Another bad thing to do is to play where you don't have to extend yourself to the limit. I intend to play only in big championship events and hard matches because when I'm always trying I'm bound to improve. If I played around in small tournaments, I'd become careless. When you get into the upper ten of golf you have to be on your toes every minute—any let down is fatal to your game.

"From now on I'm going to work hard and sleep long. That's the only way to keep on top."

"Funny thing," I remarked, "winners of big championships don't seem able to repeat."

Sarazen only grinned.

BEAUTY COLLECTION

CUTTINGS FROM BEAUTY ARTICLES. THE CREAM OF MODERN BEAUTY ADVICE.

REMOVING BAD COMPLEXIONS

Cosmetics can never really help a poor complexion; often they are positively harmful. The sensible, rational way is to actually remove the thin veil of stifling, half-dead scarf skin from the face, and give the fresh, vigorous, and beautiful young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe.

This is best done in a very simple way, by merely applying mercolised wax at night, like cold cream, and washing it off in the morning. It absorbs the disfiguring cuticle gradually and harmlessly, leaving a brilliant natural complexion. Of course, this also takes with it all such facial blemishes as red blotches, tan, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, etc.

The new skin is usually several degrees lighter, and finer in texture.

TO KILL HAIR ROOTS

Women annoyed with disfiguring growths of superfluous hair wish to know not merely how to temporarily remove the hair but how to kill the roots permanently. For this purpose pure-powdered pheminol may be applied directly to the objectionable hair growth. The recommended treatment is designed not only to instantly remove the hair but also to actually kill the roots so that the growth will not return. About an ounce of pheminol should be sufficient.

HOW TO HAVE THICK AND PRETTY HAIR

Soaps and artificial shampoos ruin many beautiful heads of hair. Few people know that a teaspoonful of good stallax dissolved in a cup of hot water has a natural affinity for the hair and makes the most delightful shampoo imaginable. It leaves the hair brilliant, soft and wavy, cleanses the scalp completely and greatly stimulates the hair growth. The only drawback is that stallax seems rather expensive. It comes to the chemist only in sealed ¼ lb. packages. However, this is sufficient for twenty-five or thirty shampoos, and it really works out very cheaply in the end.

A Steel Tennis Racquet

Here is the world's finest tennis racquet. It has a steel frame and steel strings, is unaffected by damp or wet weather, lasts longer and is the cheapest racquet you can buy.

DAYTON Steel Racquet

The tubular steel frame cannot warp, crack or break. It will never require a press.

The strings of smooth twisted steel wire cannot be cut or broken in hard play and will never break due to dampness. The racquet can even be played in the rain.

The Dayton Steel Racquet is made in the standard weights, has the standard wooden grip and is perfectly balanced. It grips and feels just like the finest wooden racquet.

It is easier to control because its steel frame offers much less resistance to the air than does a wooden frame.

It will last longer and cost less in the end than any other racquet made.

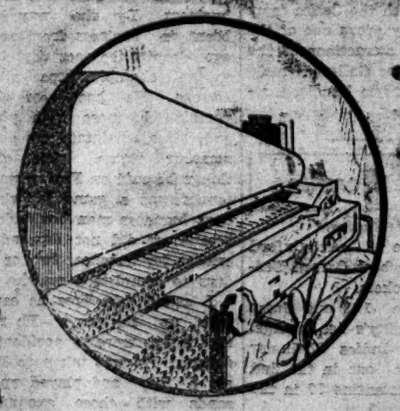
HYGIENIC MACHINE-MADE Cigarettes



OBVIOUSLY MACHINE-MADE CIGARETTES are more HYGIENIC and more CONSISTENTLY WELL MADE than those made by any other process.

In the manufacturing of "CAPSTAN" Cigarettes for instance;

POINT No 1

Pure dust-free tobacco leaf is fed to Modern Machines in Model Factories and no soiled human hand comes into contact with the cigarette during the process of manufacture.

POINT No 2

Machine-Made Cigarettes are uniformly well made. Each paper receives its proper quota of tobacco leaf and is rolled to the correct degree of "tightness". This Uniformity is impossible to attain under any other process.

JULIUS CAESAR

The boys of the Public School are to be very heartily congratulated upon the undoubted success of their production of Julius Caesar. I had the pleasure of seeing it in rehearsal, and twice during the past week. I was particularly struck with the sincerity of all the players and the very careful attention to both in mounting and in acting. The producers, Mr. H. G. Whitcher and Mr. Moses Moosa are to be complimented upon the work accomplished by their willing players.

Producers and players were not satisfied in just giving us a straight-forward representation of Shakespeare's play, but they went farther afield and from the pages of Plutarch and Roman historians culled the manners of the times and thus created a thoroughly convincing atmosphere.

In a very long cast, and a very good one, it is difficult to pay tribute to everyone or even to mention them, but a few of the players really stood out as actors of no little merit. I would give pride of place to J. R. Jacob, whose playing of Brutus was in every way excellent. He has a nice voice which he uses well and his deportment was good. He spoke his blank verse with just the right lilt; an altogether pleasing portrayal. Another piece of genuine Shakespearean work was supplied by W. Mahon. He played the part of Calpurnia. Not only did his make-up carry conviction—he certainly made a very pretty woman—but he delivered his lines splendidly. I doubt if I have heard a boy recite better. Colin Marshall made a fine figure as Caesar. He entered into his part and gave his lines well.

P. Chalchek is a clever actor. He will be seen to better advantage in a modern play. His portrayal of Cassius was nevertheless good. He had his own idea about the part and if it was not exactly Shakespearean it was consistent. If a word of advice is not out of place I would suggest that he controls his arms a bit and that he does not treat Cassius as a modern man-about-town.

A. E. Nobleston did fine work as Casca. He made every line tell and well deserved his laughs which all came in the right place.

J. H. Levis played the part of Anthony. He is a finely built young athlete and looked every inch the Anthony of history. He has a fine control of voice and expression. His best scene was naturally that following the murder of Caesar. It was a remarkably fine piece of work. Levis should carry one with his acting. He will develop into a first class player. The part of Portia was nicely portrayed by B. Josephs.

The crowds were all well managed and a word of praise should be given to the school orchestra under Mr. Pringle which gave pleasing selections.

Altogether a first class show and one upon which all call for congratulation.

SHANGHAI BALLET

There is no doubt about it. Shanghai is a wonderful place for dancing. Whether it is ball room dancing, or stage dancing we are particularly lucky with our teachers and their pupils. It was only a few days ago that Madame Kelvey put up a splendid entertainment in which her youthful pupils gave delight to all who witnessed them. On Thursday last we were treated to yet another program in which Madame Koulichevskaya, a famous ballet mistress in the Russian Imperial Theater, Petrograd, and sometime teacher of the Great Pavlova, presented some of her pupils.

Although the program was a most ambitious one it was splendidly carried out and reflected the greatest credit upon the teacher. In Mrs. S. Peken we have a dancer of first class merit. She was perfectly delightful in three joyous little dances. We ought to see a great deal more of this lady's work. Miss Buchanan, Miss Barashkova, Mrs. Tomina and Mr. Bratoff all contributed fine dancing. A popular item was the Dutch dance executed by Mr. R. Cowell and Mrs. Featherstonhaugh. I don't remember having seen this duo before but they are certainly good and worth watching for future shows.

The next time Madame Koulichevskaya's pupils give an evening I hope they will receive greater support. They deserve it and the people who turn up will enjoy their work.

MISS HABER

I understand that Miss Haber has been persuaded by her many friends to stay over for a week or so and give another of her clever recitals. I presume that they have learned that she has a lot of new sketches in her bag and that they are good.

We may hope to see and hear her either next Wednesday week or the following Saturday at the Old Carlton.
